PARDON EMBEZZLER SHAW

"MAINE DOC COOK" NOW OMITS MUCH OF FORMER STORY

Joseph Knowles is delivering his lecture throughout New England, telling of his life in the Maine woods. A stenographic report of his lecture one week ago last Tuesday night at the Opera House at Bangor shows that in Knowles' actual lecture he spoke just 4,614 words. This was divided as follows:

Why he went in the woods	366 words
General statements about birds and trees	816 words
What he actually did in the woods	948 words
Arrival and receptions at Megantic and Portland	2,484 words
Total	4,614 words

Examination of the files of the newspapers which printed Knowles' story of his exploits in the Maine woods will show that he gave more than one version of his story of how he killed the bear. In one version he told of catching the bear in a pit and clubbing it to death. In another version he told of killing the bear by means of a deadfall, or trap, which causes a tree trunk to fall on the bear, killing it. In his lecture Knowles has given up talking about the most interesting exploit in the woods, how he killed the bear. In his talk at Bangor of two hours here is ALL he said about the killing of the bear:

During the time I was in the woods I not only caught fish but bear, and killed one deer and found one killed. How would I get a bear? I had no axe, but could build a trap to catch a bear. I should call it an open deadfall or pit, not unlike the trap the squaws in the West have made and held with rocks to catch bears.

SIXTY-NINE WORDS OUT OF 4,614 ABOUT HOW HE KILLED THE BEAR.

In Knowles' original story an entire installment was given up to the bear killing. For as Knowles pointed out then, he was a

MAKE 3 INQUIRIES ON BLAZE

The new Suffolk County Grand Jury began a searching investigation of the fire horror at noon today. This was the most important of the various inquiries begun by the city, State and county authorities.

District Attorney Pelletier accompanied the Grand Jurors to the scene of the fire. Others present were Captain Armstrong of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, Building Commissioner Everett and Fire Commissioner Cole.

District Attorney Pelletier said:

"It is an awful holocaust and as the Grand Jury is in session I thought that it was well to have them view the situation and see just what was there. If there has been any violation of the law they will have evidence of it at first sight."

A second important investigation was made by the State police, acting under orders from Chief Jophanna Whitney. This was done by Inspectors James J. Grady and Frank L. Hardiman. Their report will be filed with Governor Foss.

Medical Examiner Leary started his inquest on the fire at 12:30 in one of the Municipal Court rooms.

Night Clerk Walsh, many of the men rescued and Captain John Driscoll and several patrolmen, were summoned to appear as witnesses at the inquest. The register of the lodging house—at first thought to have been destroyed—will be an important piece of evidence, it is said.

Mayor Visits Fire; Orders Rigid Probe

Mayor Fitzgerald made a personal investigation of the fire today. After a two-hour inspection of the building and the vicinity, he ordered a thorough probe to be started at once.

The Mayor's first step was to confer at City Hall with Building Commissioner Everett, Fire Commissioner Cole, Chairman Mahoney of the Health Board, and Supervisor of Construction John J. Mahoney.

Later Commissioner Everett began an inquiry under orders from the Mayor. The Mayor also stated that the police would figure in the investigation, as they have the lodging houses of the city under their jurisdiction.

DEEP PROBE TO FIX BLAME FOR FIRE HORROR

The worst fire in Boston's history for loss of life came early today when flames raced through the Arcadia, a South End lodging house for men, and in 15 fiery minutes burned out the lives of twenty-seven unfortunates, fatally injured two more and caused lesser injuries to three score others.

House, One of Sixty.

The Arcadia is located at the north corner of Washington and Laconia streets, just above Dover street. It is one of a chain of sixty such houses operated in Boston and several other cities by Joseph G. Lyons, a well-to-do resident of Brookline.

The fire and smoke sent men naked from their cots, for the lodgers in these institutions habitually strip, roll their clothes into bundles, which are put under their pillows, and sleep without night-clothes. There were 170 lodgers.

Like Dante's Inferno.

When the flames were at their worst and the men were seen clinging to the top-story window sills, jammed on the one rear fire escape or crawling across a narrow plank over an alley on the rear side—with firemen reaching for them from ladder tops,

MEXICO ORDERS DIAZ TO ACTIVE WAR SERVICE

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 3.—An order was published this morning by the War Department transferring General Porfirio Diaz from the retired list to the active list. The order bears date of September 29.

General Francisco Villa has postponed his departure for Chihuahua City until tomorrow, to the meantime sending assurances to foreign consuls in that city that the constitutionalists will respect lives and property. It is certain, however, that Villa will force "rebel currency" upon merchants there.

The peace commission, headed by Senor Hernandez, which represented to General Villa in Juarez that seven federal generals, including Orozco, Salazar, Caraveo and Landa, who were defeated at Tierre Blanca, were willing to surrender, acted without the sanction of General Huerta. This information was secured here today at the Mexican consulate.

Scouts reported to the rebels in Nuevo Laredo that the constitutionalists will make another attack on Monterey tonight. The rebels have received reinforcements of artillery.

Reports that Dr. Urrutia, the "firebrand statesman of Mexico," will re-enter the Huerta cabinet, were received today when he asked to be relieved of his duties as head of the government's medical school and hospital.

General Huerta is fighting hard to keep his grip on affairs. He caused General Blanquet, the war minister, to issue an "official" statement today denying that Tuxpan has been captured by rebels.

General Blanquet at the same time outlined plans for a new campaign in northern Mexico. Two thousand soldiers under Colonel Alberto Salis are being sent to Manzanillo, bringing the federal forces in Sinaloa up to 8,500. In addition to reinforcements to Zuloaga, the government is preparing to make a campaign against the rebels around Ciudad Victoria.

The arrival in Vera Cruz of Special Envoy John Lind opens the way to a renewal of negotiations with the Huerta government, if the latter takes the initiative. Mr. Lind today made a report in Washington on conditions in the oil fields at Tuxpan.

M'ADOO'S FIRST REPORT LAUDS CURRENCY BILL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The pending currency reform measure now before Congress is indorsed as a bulwark against financial panics by Secretary of the Treasury W. C. McAdoo, in his first annual report to Congress, submitted today.

"The people of this country are to be congratulated upon the early prospect of sound legislation on this vitally important subject," says Secretary McAdoo. "Should Congress enact the fundamentals of this pending measure it is believed that permanent protection will be provided against recurring financial crises and that adequate facilities will be created for that legitimate and sound expansion of credits so vital to the prosperity of our great and growing country.

A certain business hesitancy, arising from tariff and monetary legislation before the special session of Congress, was to be expected. But there are evidences of a propaganda of pessimism which produced a condition of extreme nervousness and tension.

"Will Be Plenty of Money."

"Despite the fact that customs will be reduced from $318,891,393.86 for 1913 to the estimated sum of $240,000,000 in 1915, through tariff revision, there will be plenty of money to run the government, and it is estimated that there will be a credit balance next year and in 1915."

The report, which covers the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, estimates that, whereas the reduction in tariff revenues may be more than $60,000,000 the estimated receipts from corporations and individuals under the income tax clause of the Underwood tariff law, will be about $105,000,000.

The recommendations of Secretary McAdoo are few. Among them are the following:

That the Secretary of the Treasury contingent fund be increased from $20,000 to $50,000.

That four new revenue cutters be acquired by the government.

That the expense of maintaining ice patrols in the North Atlantic Ocean to warn liners of icebergs be abolished and safe lanes charted or that the steamship companies pay the cost of maintaining such patrols.

That the life saving and revenue cutter service be consolidated into a coast guard service, which would be a sort of naval reserve in time of war.

National Debt $2,916,204,913.

The total national debt June 30, was $2,916,204,913. The total receipts including postal, for the fiscal year of 1913, were $1,014,131,605, against receipts of $992,249,230 for 1912, the increase in receipts being $21,882,375.

The total disbursements for 1913, including postal, were $1,010,812,448, against disbursements of $965,273,677 in 1912, an increase of $45,538,771.

During the year $41,741,258 was spent on the Panama Canal. Under the head of "Cash in treasury June 30," the report gives the following statistics:

Reserve fund of gold coin and bullion, $150,000,000; trust funds, $1,573,157,169; general fund, $157,844,703.

Secretary McAdoo estimates that it will cost $285,500,000 to run the post-office department next year, but says if business conditions are normal he believes receipts will equal expenses. The cost for running the department in 1915 is estimated at $307,000,000. It is figured that 524,000 persons will be subject to the income tax and 150,000 corporations.

Special mention is made of the government's special activity to restore confidence in Dayton, Ohio, after the flood, by making the national banks there government depositories, and of Mr. McAdoo's offer to deposit $500,000,000 in banks to prevent a commercial crisis due to the "propaganda of pessimism."

MISS EDITH MARION FORD, who will no longer trust her money to a stocking-pocket. She lost a roll of bills and the police are wondering who got it.

LOSES MONEY FROM POCKET IN STOCKING

Miss Edith Marion Ford, twenty, of No. 50 Pleasant street, Winthrop, has made the first report the Boston police have received on the loss of money from the latest style stocking pocket.

And the question the police of Division 16 are trying to solve is, "Who got the money?"

Miss Ford lost the money—$15—from the stocking pocket while on Westland avenue while on her way to her sister's at No. 111 Hemenway street.

A nearby workman was accused of picking the money up. He was taken to the Boylston street police station. There he was searched. No money was found on him. A further investigation of the case will be made tomorrow.

"The money felt safe and snug," said Miss Ford, "from the time I left home until I reached Westland avenue. Then I realized the money had dropped out. When I reached a convenient spot I felt for the roll and found it was gone. I thought the man picked it up as I left the police. Henceforth I will carry my money in a handbag, where it will be safer. Incidentally it will be easier to reach than it was in the pocket at the knee of the stocking.

PURITY CRUSADE STIRS MEETING IN EAST BOSTON

At the purity crusade mass meeting of East Boston citizens in Fitton Hall to protest against social irregularities among children, the Rev. William H. McDonough, pastor of the Star of the Sea Church, gave a vivid description of vice conditions.

"This meeting is to protect our innocent children against the brutes of men. There are twenty-eight cases already before the court, and the children have told us 'We are not the only ones,'" said Fr. McDonough.

"Now, whereas these frightful conditions exist here:

"Be it resolved, that the Legislature of this State be petitioned to enact a curfew law for the protection of our children throughout the State.

"Further, be it resolved that his Honor, the Mayor of the city, and the City Council be urged to provide a city ordinance for the immediate correction of this social evil in our midst.

"Be it also resolved that these resolutions be sent to the Governor of the State, the Mayor and City Council."

After Fr. McDonough read the resolutions they were put to a standing vote and carried unanimously.

Judge Charles Brown presided and introduced the speakers.

Women of New York, Kansas City, Detroit, St. Paul and other cities who also signed boycott pledges, were asked to send them to Mrs. Ella Logan, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs at Washington to be presented to Congress as an evidence of the attitude of the women of the nation on the present conditions in the egg market.

POLICE GUARD RUSSELL HOME DURING BURIAL

The arrangements for the funeral and burial of the late William C. Russell, the Melrose recluse, at 2 o'clock this afternoon, included the presence of a uniformed police officer at the entrance of the Russell homestead. The officer had orders from Chief of Police Kerr to "prevent any possible disturbance during the services."

"Dakota Dan" before leaving the Melrose home of James J. Curtis this morning for Boston, ordered a funeral hack to meet him at the Wyoming railroad station upon the arrival of the 2 o'clock train from Boston.

"Dakota Dan" said it was his intention to join the funeral cortege as the carriages left the estate on their way to Wyoming cemetery where the burial will take place. He said he did not intend to enter the Russell home during the services.

Mrs. Fred Leach of Stoneham and her mother, Mrs. Sarah Crafts, planned to be at the railroad station to ride with "Dakota Dan" in the carriage on the mile and a half journey behind the hearse carrying the body of William C. Russell to its last resting place. Mrs. Crafts is the "Aunt Sarah" of the famous will case and Mrs. Leach is the woman who asked for an autopsy upon the body of Mr. Russell.

"Fresno Dan" was in the Russell home today assisting in the completion of the funeral arrangements. They included a simple Universalist church service. The Rev. Harold Marshall, pastor of the Melrose Universalist Church, was selected as the officiating clergyman. William C. Russell was a member of the church and had donated a parsonage to the church.

The bearers selected were Fred H. Goss, a member of the church, and Victor A. Friends, a Melrose business man. Both are life-long friends of the Russell family. The services were held in the parlor of the Russell home.

Ferdinand Almy, co-executor of the Russell estate, had charge of the funeral arrangements. He said the funeral party would be confined to relatives and immediate friends.

Henry W. Clark, the undertaker, threw an air of mystery over the plans by declaring that he had a funeral in another part of the town at 2 o'clock and could not possibly be at the Russell home at that hour. The announcements at the Russell home, however, cleared up the mystery.

LOPEZ, MEXICAN OUTLAW, GETS BY MINE GUARD

BINGHAM, Utah, Dec. 3.—Guards at the mine where Frank Lopez, the Mexican outlaw, who it has developed was formerly trick rider and crack rifle shot in Buffalo Bill's wild West, show, declared today that the desperado, in their opinion, has escaped and that he probably far from this section of the country, although the sheriff believes the man dead. Several entrances to the mine hitherto unknown to those who have been on duty have been discovered. That the bandit took advantage of these is considered probable as the smoke used to drive him from his retreat only made the unprotected places easier for him to find. At one of these entrances were found footprints.

The "hidden" entrances were revealed to the guards by the fact that the smoke from the smudges met counter air currents and that much fresh air was finding its way in. The general opinion of expert miners is that Lopez escaped during last night.

Publisher of Sex Novel Held for Trial

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Although holding that Mitchell Kennerly, publisher of "Hazar Revelay," a sex-problem book, must stand trial for mailing an obscene book, Judge Learned Hand doubts eugenic literature is a menace. That the American people will not solve their sex problem on the "standard of a child's library" is the essence of his opinion denying a demurrer to the indictment. Judge Hand says the jury, however, must be the censor.

A. W. FINLAY WINS FIGHT FOR DIVORCE

Alfred W. Finlay, prominent yachtsman and publisher of Boston and Quincy, who has been suing his wife for divorce in the Superior Court at Dedham for the past two days, today won his case when his wife, Dora N. Finlay, agreed to withdraw her libel and also agreed that Mr. Finlay be granted an absolute divorce with the custody of their minor children.

This decision came after a half hour conference between the attorneys for both sides in Judge Raymond's lobby.

Mr. Finlay in his suit named Arthur Bradmon, an actor. Mrs. Finlay filed a cross libel charging her husband with cruel and abusive treatment.

Miss Dorothea Finlay, their daughter, was brought into the cases and told upon the witness stand of her mother's love scenes with Bradmon.

Mrs. Finlay in signing the agreement states that she does so of her own free will and is inspired by no other motive than a sense of justice.

2,000 Antis and Suffragists Get a Hearing

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Nearly 2,000 suffragists and anti-suffragists crowded into the great caucus room in the House office building today and massed in the corridors, primed for their first fight before the House rules committee for and against a House committee on woman suffrage. Two hours were allotted the suffragists to present their claims, and two hours to the "antis" to answer arguments. As soon as Chairman Henry had called the meeting to order, Representative Clyde Kelly, a Pennsylvania Progressive, offered a resolution that all meetings of the committee on the question of woman suffrage be public and that all records be published. Representative Lenroot of Wisconsin offered an amendment, which was accepted, giving the committee the right to hold executive sessions when it saw fit, but making the record votes of the committee public at all times. Representative Kelly's original motion was lost by a vote of 5 to 1. When Mr. Kelly voted a number of women tried to vote with him and this called forth a reprimand from Chairman Henry.

"If there is any disorder I will order the room cleared," he said. Chairman Henry then turned the session over to Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, who introduced the various speakers and cautioned her women's friends to restrain their enthusiasm.

She introduced Mrs. Helen Gardiner of Washington as the first speaker.

Commends United Action of Churches

The executive committee of the Massachusetts Federation of Churches, at its meeting today in the Ford Building, commended the co-operation of priests and ministers in East Boston in fighting social evils, and passed the following resolution:

The executive committee of the Massachusetts Federation of Churches notes, with pleasure the hearty co-operation last evening of the Catholic and Protestant clergy of East Boston in arranging mass meetings of men to protest against immoral conditions in its streets, and favors the co-operation of our Protestant ministers with the Roman Catholic churches and Jewish synagogues on moral and social issues wherever and whenever possible.

The same committee have asked the different organizations of Boston charities why it is not possible for them to unite and save expenses by the federation of charity organizations.

Need More Cash for School for Cripples

Trustees Ask Money Sufficient to Make Institution's Future Safe.

The thirteenth annual report of the Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children at No. 241 St. Botolph street, which is just out, embodies the report of the trustees, which, while acknowledging gratefully the gifts of the year, pleads earnestly that the endowment fund may be increased by donations and bequests to a point where the future of the school may be safe. The year has been marked by the teaching of the children out of doors, made possible by the gift of an outdoor schoolroom by Miss Harriet Otis Cruft in the Spring of 1912. For the first time, also, the children have had the services of a school dentist, and the report shows, by the large number of cases attended, that this was a real necessity.

PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN DIGESTS FOOD WHEN STOMACH CAN'T—IT'S GREAT

Stops Indigestion, Sourness, Gas and Dyspepsia in Five Minutes.

If you feel bloated after eating, and you believe it is the food which fills you; if what little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations or sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you need Pape's Diapepsin to stop food fermentation and Indigestion.

It neutralizes excessive acid, stomach poison; absorbs that misery-making gas and stops fermentation which sours your entire meal and causes Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Griping, etc. Your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, producing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pape's Diapepsin will cost fifty cents at any pharmacy here, and will convince any stomach sufferer in five minutes that Fermentation and Sour Stomach is causing the misery of Indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Nervousness or Gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that relief is waiting at any drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapepsin will regulate any out-of-order Stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort, all of any kind of food you eat.

"HANDLE THEM GENTLY, BOYS," MULLEN'S ORDER AS MEN GATHER UP DEAD

Boys, be as gentle and careful as you can. We're all human, and even if these poor unfortunate fellows had no homes and had to sleep in a fifteen-cent bed under a fictitious name, they are entitled to the same care on our part as if they were in the highest station of life.—Fire Chief Mullen's order to the firemen handling the bodies of the victims of the Arcadia Lodging House.

SURVIVOR SAYS NO FIRE GONG WAS RUNG

through swirls of smoke and tongues of flame—then the scene was more like a staging of Dante's Inferno, than a scene in real life. Horror piled on horror.

The twenty-seven deaths were caused by fire—as shown by charred bodies—by suffocation—as shown by victims who never got out of their bunks—and by jumping from windows.

Stern Search for Blame

Out of this holocaust has started the most drastic investigation that ever brought city and State officials together to probe a disaster.

The investigation is being directed by Mayor Fitzgerald, District Attorney Pelletier, the fire department authorities and by the State police. Through the latter it will come to the official notice of Governor Foss.

District Attorney Pelletier took the new December Grand Jury for Suffolk County to the scene at 1 o'clock, saying:

"If there has been any violation of the law the Grand Jury will have evidence of it at first sight."

Mayor Fitzgerald, the moment he was told of the nature of the calamity, said: "I'll start an investigation at once."

The Mayor lost no time. He went to the scene and before noon he had before him in conference at City Hall, Building Commissioner Everett, Building Inspector John H. Mahoney, Fire Commissioner Charles H. Cole and Chairman F. X. Mahoney of the Board of Health.

Inquest Started

Before he went into the conference the Mayor said: "I did not know there was such a hotel in Boston. I am disgusted with what I have seen."

Medical Examiner Leary ordered an inquest after he had made his investigation of the building and had viewed the dreadful remains of victims in City Hospital morgue. The inquest was begun at Suffolk Municipal Court at 12:30, with James Walsh, night clerk at the Arcadia, lodgers, firemen and other witnesses present, whose testimony should determine cause and responsibility if possible.

At the same time, State Fire Inspector James Grady, from the Department of the State Police, had investigated the fire, to make a report to Deputy Chief Neal, who will report, if he sees necessary, to Governor Foss. On account of the terrible result of the fire and of the lodging house problem which is involved in it, there was a strong feeling that the attention of the Governor would be called to the disaster and to th esituation which it has uncovered.

Dispue Over Cause.

The cause of the fire was in dispute. The flames came first from under the main stairway on the first floor.

Proprietor Lyons said that a man had made threats against the place. Mr. Lyons was sure that the fire was incendiary.

But State Fire Inspector James Grady reported that the cause was probably spontaneous combustion in waste and paper under the stairway.

Regarding the condition of the lodging house and the presence or lack of fire appliances and regulations—Officer John Flynn of the city Board of Health said:

"I inspected the Arcadia last Friday and found everything all right, fire exits designated by red lights, water buckets filled and rooms not overcrowded then."

The Arcadia was one of the the string of three score lodging houses run in Boston and other cities by Joseph G. Lyons of Brookline. There are seven in Boston, all of the same general type, with beds from fifteen cents a night up.

"I intend to investigate this matter thoroughly," said Mayor Fitzgerald, when told of the number of dead. "Something is wrong somewhere. The number of dead is appalling, and I have already instructed Building Commissioner Everett to begin an investigation and report his finding to me."

Deep Probe for Blame.

Medical Examiner Leary described the fire as a crime, and the bodies had hardly been taken from the building when he began making preparations for an inquest.

"I am going at this matter with an axe," he said. "The building looked like a slaughter house. This is one of the greatest crimes ever committed in this city. It is wrong—dead wrong. An inquest will be started this morning. To get to the root of this thing is my aim and I shall summons witnesses to appear at the courthouse in Pemberton square today. Let us know who is responsible."

Fire Commissioner Charles H. Cole blames the heavy loss of life upon inadequate fire legislation. He said today: "It is no more than you can expect under the present laws governing cheap lodging houses. This fire started in a pile of papers stored under a main stairway and the fire escapes could not meet the emergency.

"The meagre fire escapes on the rear of the building offered escape to only a few. Those occupying rooms in the front of the building were cut off by a wall of fire which soared up the stairways and drove them to the windows to escape suffocation. There were no fire escapes on the front or side of the building and most of the dead were found near the windows.

The great rapidity with which the fire leaped from floor to floor caught the lodgers unawares and scores awoke to find their beds bestrewed by the flames. Pandemonium broke loose and a stampede that threw wisdom and caution to the winds followed the rush to escape.

Most of the men were undressed. They were blinded and choked by the smoke and beat and kicked and staggered their way to the windows. The top floor of the five-story structure was one huge dormitory with two rows of double-tiered beds running its entire length. Those on this floor crowded to the fire escapes in the rear. The rush was too great, however, and twenty or more who were unable to gain the fire escapes took to the ledge of the mansard roof overlooking Laconia street.

There clinging as the flames belched from windows beneath them and crept across the beds they had vacated to the sills of the windows. When the firemen arrived many of the lodgers had reached the point of exhaustion and were ready to let go their hold. Then the first of the ladders ascended out of the street below and they clung on.

Several narrowly escaped being hurled from the coping into the street in the rush for the ladders, which fell just short of the coping on which they were clinging. The firemen ascended as far as they could and caught the lodgers as they jumped to the tops of the ladders, four stories to the air.

Leaps to His Death.

A negro and another man, who occupied rooms on the Washington street front of the building, were trapped at the start, and both took to the windows. A back draught sent a sheet of fire along the front of the building and the negro jumped to his death on the pavements fifty feet below. The other man followed a few seconds later and was found unconscious on the sidewalk. Both some near landing on the heads of the crew of Chemical 2, who were running the first line of hose into the main doorway.

Another man jumped from the top floor into Laconia street, receiving injuries from which he died later at the hospital. Meanwhile the fire was lapping its way through the shell-like partitions of the rooms on the fourth floor, which housed forty men. The hallways were blocked with fallen bodies and luggage, and those who did not gain the fire escapes, either were suffocated, or jumped and caught the ladders over which those on the floor above were being rescued. Many were injured leaping for the ladders, but their falls were broken by the firemen below.

Eight of the dead were found on the top floor, eleven on the fourth and five on the third floor. A large number of those who lost their lives never knew how they met their fate. The majority are believed to have suffocated in their sleep. These are believed to have either been intoxicated or stupefied by smoke and failed to awaken. A few were trampled into helplessness and died trying to crawl to the windows.

The terrified lodgers had no time to think of saving anyone but themselves and the weak were forgotten and fell prey to the flames.

Fire Escapes Choked.

A strong draught carried the flames throughout the third floor, but those on this floor heard the first warning of danger and all but the five who were imprisoned in their rooms escaped by way of the fire escapes or jumping into life nets in the street or to the roof of an adjoining one-story ell.

Policemen from the East Dedham street station, lined along the fire escapes, were forced to beat the fugitives with their clubs to start them on their way to the street and clear the fire-escapes to make room for others fleeing from the building.

Patrolmen Daniel J. Leary, Daniel Frazier, Finnegan and Robert Dale dragged scores of helpless men from the burning building and carried, dragged or guided them to the street.

The policemen stuck to their task until the flames burst from all the upper windows. The streets for blocks in three directions were scenes of the wildest excitement.

The dead, dying and injured were distributed about on the sidewalks, neglected, while the first arrivals were striving to rescue others from the flames.

Every available ambulance in the city was rushed to the scene and all manner of conveyances were pressed into service to take the injured to the hospital.

A special staff of doctors and nurses was in readiness at the city hospital when the first ambulance arrived. This was quickly followed by others.

Physicians were driven in automobiles to the scene of the fire, and attended many of the victims on the street and in nearby houses.

Three alarms were sounded for the fire, but at the outset the firemen directed their efforts towards saving the inmates.

The blaze is believed to have started among some rubbish in a rear hallway on the first floor and raced up the stairways as though the steps were made of celluloid. The skylight on the roof is said to have battened down and, instead of shooting through the roof, the flames dropped back into the fifth, fourth and third floors.

Labyrinth of Tiny Rooms.

The first floor was taken up by the main entrance of the building, a shooting gallery and the liquor store of Patrick Sullivan & Co. The second, third and fourth floors were a labyrinth of rooms, hardly bigger than cells and sparsely furnished. The top floor was just a dormitory.

Each of the rooms on the lower floors was separated by a thin wooden partition, leading from the walls to narrow hallways.

Night Clerk William Walsh had just finished up his books when the fire was discovered. He escaped from the building.

Joseph Lyons was lessee of the lodging house and the building was owned by M. H. Guiesian.

There is a strong suspicion the fire was set. A man who had lived at the house for three years and occupied a room on the third floor said he was prevented from entering the building a short time before the fire was discovered by a man whom he met in the doorway.

The stranger, who he described as tall, light complected and wearing a gray suit, seized him by the arm, he claims, and demanded to know where he was going and after a few words allowed him to pass upstairs.

Sees Glare of Flames.

Thomas J. Kelley was emerging from a lunch room across the street when the glare of flames in the doorway of the Arcadia House attracted his attention and he sounded an alarm.

This was quickly followed by a second and a third. Kelley returned to the building and with Patrolman Leary and several others attempted to force a way upstairs but failed.

They then went to the rear and by clambering over the one-story ell reached the fire escapes. Patrolman Dale was in Harrison avenue when he saw the flames bursting from the windows on the upper floors and sent word to the station house to send all the ambulances in the city.

Chief John A. Mullen arrived on the second alarm and directed the work of rescue. Medical Examiner Magrath appeared a few minutes later and he was followed by Fire Commissioner Charles Cole.

The work of rescue was carried on under severe handicaps. The elevated structure in Washington street delayed the raising of ladders in the front of the building where the two men, who jumped lost their lives.

Laconia street was also too narrow for the firemen to do effective work in such an emergency.

The air was filled with the cries of the injured or the shouts for help of the panic-stricken people at the windows.

Crowds gathered from all points and the policemen and firemen worked like Trojans.

Life nets were unfurled and spread, but as many people missed the nets as jumped into them, and they were abandoned when the ladders were raised.

Harrowing tales of those left behind in the building and the horror and peril of their escape were told by those carried to the street and as fast as persons in danger were located efforts were made to reach them.

In many cases the rescuers were successful, but several times firemen were reaching out to grasp a man pleading for assistance only to see him slip back into the flames and perish.

Find Bodies on Floor.

Heaps of bedding were hurled from the windows by the lodgers in the hope they might save those who jumped from the windows from being dashed to death on the pavements, and in some instances they were successful.

The impetus of the flames baffled the firemen and it was nearly an hour before the fire was under control. It was some time later before the number of dead was known.

Medical Examiner Timothy J. Leary, in whose district the burned building is situated, was summoned and after the fire had been extinguished went into the building with Medical Examiner Magrath.

They were accompanied by Fire Commissioner Cole and Deputy Fire Chief McDonough. Bodies were found scattered about the three upper floors and the work of removing the dead was a grewsome spectacle.

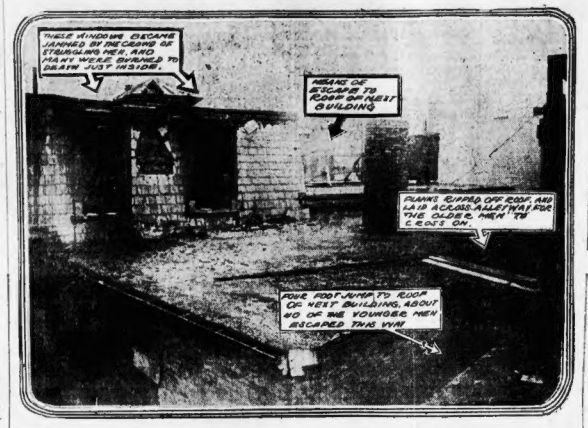
Each of the bodies was lowered to the street in a specially prepared canvas sack, invented for the purpose following a fire in Harwich street three years ago in which six persons lost their lives.

The bodies were packed by the two medical examiners and conveyed in an automobile to the City Hospital Morgue. Many of the dead had been roasted alive. The features of all were badly charred and the majority not recognizable.

Six other persons lost their lives in this same building during a fire in the early eighties.

A man who was refused admission when he applied for a night's lodging.

They declined to state whether or not they have a description of the man under suspicion. The police dragnet was out, however, in all sections of the city at an early hour.



THESE WINDOWS ESCAPE JAMMED BY THE CRUSHING OF STRUGGLING MEN, AND MANY PERISHED THERE TO DEATH JUST INSIDE.

CITY'S GREATEST CRIME SAYS EXAMINER RALEY

Medical Examiner Timothy Leary today declared the fire horror one of the greatest crimes ever committed in Boston. He immediately started a rigorous investigation, reporting the fire to District Attorney Pelletier for action.

The medical examiner said:

"I am going at this matter with an axe. The building looked like a slaughter house. This is one of the greatest crimes ever committed in this city. It is wrong—dead wrong. An inquest will be started this morning. To get to the root of this thing is my aim and I shall summons witnesses to appear at the building on the Washington street or Laconia street sides.

"I think we have taken all the bodies from the ruins. My examination of the place was not as full as it would have been under other conditions because we had to work by lantern light.

"This affair has gone far beyond the mere matter of reporting death. It is altogether too big a thing."

POLICE HUNTING FOR MAN REFUSED BROOM AS THE INCENDIARY

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush your Kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly.

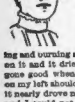
No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid, which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

ITCHING AND BURNING RASH

Started on Chest. Then on Left Shoulder and Arm. Nearly Driven Crazy. Used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. Rid of Rash.



304 Anawan St., Fall River, Mass.—"My trouble started mostly on the front of my body and on my chest. It was just brown spots at first and it looked like freckles, and then they seemed to run in together and they looked like a rash of some kind. It did not trouble me for almost a year and then my upper lip and my face right near my eye broke out and it was itching and burning all the time. I used —— on it and it dried it up, but that was not gone good when the same rash broke out on my left shoulder and on my left arm and it nearly drove me crazy. I could not sleep and I could not do anything. I scratched and it made it so it sore on my back and face. My scratching irritated it something awful. I could not bear anything to touch my back at all for two weeks and it would make it itch and burn so badly I would cry out and have to take my clothes off.

"I tried —— and that did not do any good. I thought I would go out of my head the way I was. But after I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment they seemed to ease me. I only used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and it took two months to get rid of the eruption." (Signed) Mrs. Katie F. Silvia, Apr. 12, 1913.

Cuticura Soap 25c. and Cuticura Ointment 50c. are sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

MULLEN ASKS WHY VICTIMS WERE MISLED BY SIGNS

CHIEF AFFECTED BY HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE

Fire Chief Mullen in a statement today charged that the wall on the Washington street side of the building was marked "Escape" when there was NO fire escape on that side at all.

Chief Mullen demanded to know WHY this was so.

Other questions which he declared vital were:

Where was the fire gong?

Where was the night watchman?

Why were there paint closets on the first floor?

"These are vital questions that we want answered," declared the fire chief. He said:

This is a terrible thing. I hardly know what to say. Of course I want to praise the fire department, for their work I consider wonderful. The loss of property is little, but the loss of life is great.

In all my experience as a fire fighter in Boston I have never seen so many dead bodies passed out from a building. Special pains were taken to wrap all the bodies in rubber bags, which were tightly clasped by buckles. This is the first time the fire department has had occasion to use these new bags in Boston.

Chief Mullen Asks: "Why?"

Why were the walls on the Washington street side marked "escape" when there was no fire escape on this side of the building?

Where was the fire gong?

Where was the night watchman?

What were these paint closets doing on the first floor?

These are vital questions we want answered.—Fire Chief Mullen in a statement today.

WAR VETERAN TELLS HOW HE SAVED FIFTY LIVES

"Dixie" McGuiggan, a veteran of the Spanish war, who registered at the Arcadia Hotel last night under the name of Joseph Dewey, and who was assigned to bed No. 638 on the top floor, told the following story:

"I went to the hotel at 8 p. m. and paid 15 cents for aeb don the sixth floor. I have seen better days, young man, and I served my country in my time. But, being kind of down in my luck, I was forced to go to the cheap lodging house for a bed. I gave an assumed name, because I was too proud to register under my own.

"Well, I said my prayers and went to bed. I feel that it is only due to God's will that I am alive this morning.

"I had been asleep some hours when I awoke with a choking sensation. The room was filled with smoke. Over near the stairway I could see flames shooting into the room. The sight was terrifying. There were nearly fifty men asleep on that floor. As I coughed and rubbed my eyes I could see other rousing themselves and choking. When they saw the flames some of them cried out in terror.

"Next to me, in bed No. 637, was a young fellow named Murphy. I reached over and shook him. He appeared to be in a stupor, coughing hoarsely as I roused him. I lifted him from the bed and shouted in his ear, 'come on Murphy, there's a fire. Get out of here.' He was bewildered and didn't seem to understand. I pulled with all my power, 'Get up, Fire, Fire, Fire.'

"Others left their beds and groped their way to the windows in the rear. There was a roof on the Lacoula street side and toward this we crawled. When we reached the window I looked out. There was a fire escape. I saw men below running down the escape, some only partly clothed. As I looked they were driven back as flames burst from the lower windows. Some screeched, some moaned. It was terrible.

"Many were driven back by the unbearable heat into the windows on the fifth floor. 'Twas a veritable Hades. Leaving the building by a window, I stumbled onto the roof of the next building. I was naked, as were most of my companions. It was bitter cold, but my first thought was to get to the roof of the building across the areaway, six feet away. Nothing daunted, I took a running leap and landed safely on the other roof.

"By that time the roof I had just left was crowded with men. The scene near the windows beggars description. Every now and then a sheet of flame would envelop those nearest the windows.

"I ripped several boards from the shanty on the roof and laid them across the alleyway. More than fifty men crossed this bridge in safety. Together we made our way down through the tenement house to the street. There kind friends took us in and gave us clothing.

"A watchman is supposed to ring a gong in case of fire in the hotel but I didn't hear a sound until awakened by smoke."

ARCADIA NIGHT CLERK CLAIMS HE WAS ON DUTY

James Walsh, the night clerk at the Arcadia lodging house, who claims that he was "on duty" when the fire started, was found in the office of the Hotel Comfort, at No. 1025 Washington street, another place owned by Lyons.

He stated that he had been on this job since last Thursday night and that his watch was from 6 o'clock at night until 6 o'clock in the morning.

"I went to work at 6 o'clock last night and spent the early hours of my watch registering the lodgers. When the fire started I was in my office on the second floor of the Arcadia.

"Arthur McGlynn, the night watchman, was with me. I first noticed that the lights appeared to get dim. I thought that they were going out altogether. Soon I smelled smoke. I started to investigate. It was difficult to locate. I went to the head of the stairs and opened the door. I was greeted with a rush of smoke. It nearly blinded me. Through the smoke I could see the flare of flames and could hear them crackle.

"I shouted to McGlynn. He had just finished his rounds a few minutes before. I cried 'fire' to him. He went to the head of the stairs and jumped through the smoke and flames, down the flight of stairs. He went to sail the fire apparatus. I yelled 'fire' and then ran to sound the automatic fire alarm on my floor. This I did by breaking the glass in front of the fire alarm box with the heel of a shoe. Then I rushed to the next floor and called McIntyre, the day clerk. He was asleep there. As the way to the street by the stairs was cut off by the fire I got out on the fire escape and made my way to the street."

NEW RUBBER BAGS FOR BODIES USED FOR FIRST TIME HERE

The new rubber bags for the removal of bodies in fires were used for the first time by the Boston fire department in today's horror.

In these bags twenty-five bodies were removed from the lodging house. The bags resemble a sleeping bood and were recently invented. Fire Chief Mullen, who explained their use, declared them a "wonderful and very practical invention."

"A body is placed in the bag inside the building," said the chief. "Thus it can be removed without any ghastly spectacle such as we have been used to in previous fires. The bag serves the double purpose of helping preserve the remains and at the same time keeping the body from the public gaze. I regard these bags as an important addition to our equipment."

Chief Mullen while he talked urged his firemen to use the greatest care in handling the bodies.

"Bora," he said, "be as gentle and careful as you can. We're all human, and even if these poor unfortunate fellows had no homes and had to sleep in a 5-cent bed under a fictitious name, they are entitled to the same care on our part as if they were in the highest station of life.

"I have been through a great many fires, but none affected me so much as this one does. It is terrible. But we have done the best we could. They were trapped as they slept."

FORTY-FIVE INJURED, ALL ALMOST NAKED, TREATED AT HOSPITAL

Forty-five of the men who escaped from the burning building were taken to the City Hospital in ambulances. Of the number thirty-eight suffered from abrasions, contusions or burns.

Every one of the forty-five was practically without a shred of clothing. They lost everything at the fire. Once at the hospital the officials secured clothing from here and there. The Salvation Army volunteered many coats, pairs of trousers and suits of underwear.

Tables were set in one of the hospital's operating rooms and there breakfast was served. Shortly afterwards twenty-four of the men were discharged. The others remained for further treatment.

MANAGER IS SILENT WHEN QUESTIONED ABOUT INSPECTION

Augustine Monahan of No. 962 Tremont street, Boston is the manager for "Lodging House King" Lyons.

An attempt was made by the police to call him this morning, shortly after the fire started, but the officer was not able to gain admittance.

Monaghan came to the scene of the fire later in the day. His duty is also that of an inspector, but according to his own story, told to the Boston AMERICAN reporter, given in the ruins after the fire had been extinguished and while the bodies of the dead were being lowered from the windows, shows that Monaghan merely visited the places for the purpose of collecting the prices that had been paid during the night for beds.

He said:

I have been in the employ of Mr. Lyons for some time. Every morning at 4 o'clock I start the rounds of the different places and check up the number of people who have lodged in the houses. I make this check from the lodging house registers. The money taken in is placed in my charge. I am also supposed to make an examination of the premises.

He was asked if he made a daily examination of the premises, but refused to answer.

BUILDING INSPECTED ONLY THREE WEEKS AGO, SAYS LESSEE

Joseph G. Lyons of No. 31 West Bourne terrace, Brookline, who leased the Arcadia lodging house as one of a chain of sixty-two establishments he conducted in Boston and other cities, said that the Arcadian was inspected only three weeks ago by a man from the Boston Building Department.

Mr. Lyons was horrified at the wholesale loss of life. On the question of inspection he said:

"The building which I lease from M. H. Golenian is inspected every three months by a regular inspector of the Boston Building Department. I do not know his name. Three weeks ago yesterday was the last time he called and inspected the building.

"I feel terribly about the loss of life. I have eight similar lodging houses in Boston and fifty-three such places in other cities in the United States.

NIGHT WATCHMAN GLYNN DECLARES HE SOUNDED AN ALARM

Arthur McGlynn, night watchman in the Arcadia, who makes his home in the place said:

"I had made a rounds of the house thirty-five minutes before the fire was discovered. Everything was all right then. I make the rounds every hour. I was in the office with Night Clerk Walsh. We smelled smoke. He investigated first and discovered the blaze in the lower corridor and stairs. He shouted to me it was getting dark. I ran to the head of the stairs. The blaze struck me in the face. The smoke was thick. I jumped down the flight of stairs, then ran down the street to the fire alarm box and sounded an alarm.

"Then I tried to get back into the building, it was impossible."

SERGEANT SAVES REGISTER; EYE IS BURNED IN RESCUES

Sergeant Jeremiah J. Riordan of the East Dedham street police station, entered the lodging house and took possession of the register which held the names of the lodgers. The sergeant's left eye was burned during his work of assisting some of the lodgers to escape. He said:

"I have seen many sights, but this certainly is the worst in my experience. It is a terrible disaster.

"At 3:30 a. m. I accompanied a man named Monahan in the building. He was employed as collector in the lodging house. I got the register. This had the names of persons who registered last night and also the names of those previously registered there. I will hold the book until after the inquest. It should be of great help in identifying the dead."

ONE-HALF BOTTLE OF THE GREAT KIDNEY REMEDY ACCOMPLISHES RESULTS

When I sent for a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, I was in great distress day and night. Before I received sample by mail, I went to our local doctor (and he is second to none in this vicinity) and told him how I felt. He put me up a bottle of medicine. I was about a week taking the medicine, but was no better than when I began. I then began your sample bottle, and before I got through with it I felt a change. The scalding sensation left me, and bother only a few times in the middle of the day. I would not have believed such a small quantity would have done so much, but before it was gone I learned that our druggist kept Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and so got a large bottle for one dollar, but actually worth one hundred dollars. I only took one large tablespoonful three times a day, and before I had taken one-half bottle I was all right and have been since. Gratefully yours,

FIRE COMMISSIONER COLE SAYS HORROR COULD BE REPEATED IN MANY OTHER PLACES

BLAMES EXISTING FIRE REGULATIONS

Probe Report No Fire Gongs Were Sounded, Hunt Night Clerk

These are among the points under investigation by fire and police authorities today:

Report fire was set by man refused admission.

Declaration no bell was sounded, as required by law, to rouse sleeping inmates.

Choking of narrow fire escapes, by rush of frantic men, trapped in a raging furnace.

Speaking to the Boston AMERICAN today, Fire Commissioner Charles W. Cole attacked the existing fire conditions in Boston in the following vigorous terms:

At last Boston has had the horror so long predicted by its fire chiefs. The same thing could happen at ten or a dozen similar lodging houses.

When you consider that 170 men were packed into a five-story structure, under condition which the State law would not allow even for animals, with one wooden stairway and outside fire escapes and no fire extinguishing appliances, it is a wonder that more lives were not lost.

Hopes Lesson Will Help.

Let us hope that out of this catastrophe we may get the necessary legislation to prevent its repetition.

The necessary authority, with the necessary men to enforce it, given to the fire department would have prevented the accumulation of rubbish that was under the stairway and saved those lives.

Automatic sprinkler heads at the top of the stairway would have put out the fire in its early stages and no loss of life would have resulted.

But for the promptness and efficiency of the fire department more lives would have been lost.

Places the Blame.

Terrible as this holocaust let us not allow the opportunity to go by to use it as an awful example and obtain fire prevention legislation this Winter at the State House.

The fire of last night was due directly to the inadequacy of the laws regulating the material, construction, use and occupancy of buildings.

It was due in part to the lack of enforcement of its existing law relative to fire hazards and fire menaces, through the unscientific scattering of the authority among different boards and departments, instead of centralizing it in one department.

To prevent terrible calamities we must require installation of fire extinguishing equipment in such buildings. We must prohibit the accumulation of combustible rubbish. We must require that the stairways be kept open.

Figures in white show how victims were unable to reach the short fire ladder. The other picture shows the only fire escape, in the rear of the building. Arrow indicates how high fire ladder reached.

'SPAN OF LIFE' SAVED 25 IN THRILLING RACE OVER ROOF

Joseph H. Brahm, a survivor, tells an interesting story of the escape by a number of men over the roof and by jumping to an adjoining building. He backs up Fire Chief Mullen regarding the misleading signs to "FIRE ESCAPES."

He describes "The Span of Life," a board walk only a foot wide, made of boards ripped from a roof, and by which fully twenty-five old men made their way to safety.

Brahm is a bricklayer by trade. He has slept in this house of death for the past ten nights. This is his story:

"I went to sleep on the top floor last before midnight. There were about forty men on the same floor with me. For some reason or other I was unable to sleep at first and was lying on the bed with my arm thrown over my face to shut the light of the incandescent lamp out of my eyes.

Heard Cry of "Fire."

"Later I dozed off into a light sleep. I heard a man shouting next me get out of bed and make some exclamation. I paid no attention to it until I heard the man utter an oath and shout 'fire.' I sat up. The room was filling with smoke then. This brought me out of bed. I grabbed my clothes and placed them under my arm.

"'Escape' signs, which I had noticed painted on the wall on the Washington street side of the room, were recalled to me. Of course I ran to that side of the room, as did many others. I forced open a window, but there was no fire escape there. I went to the next and the next, but with the same results.

"I was frightened by this time. It looked bad. The flames were shooting into the room by this time. Then I circled to the windows on the Lacouia street side, but with no better results. I was afraid that I would burn to death. There was only one place left and that was the back of the room.

"Here I found a chance to get out. In the meantime a panic had started in the room. Men were fighting with each other, but without gaining anything by it. I shrieked to them above the shouts of the others and asked them to come this way. I had found a way out.

Young Help the Old.

"I stepped to the roof of the adjoining building. Others fell on me. We ran across a short space, but were met with an open space between the buildings, four feet wide. The younger men jumped. The older ones were afraid to jump. They feared the fall to the street of five stories.

"So planks were ripped off the roof and laid across the areaway so the old men might cross. They faltered at first, but the younger men extended a helping hand to guide them over.

"A number of policemen were on the street and shouted to us. They cried, 'don't jump. The firemen are coming with ladders to take you down. Don't jump or you will be killed.' This helped us to remain calm. But the smoke was pouring about us and we were gasping for breath. The smoke was so dense that I couldn't see my hand in front of my face.

"But the scene inside the room was one that I shall never forget, not even if I live to be a thousand years old—the shouts and cries, men falling over the beds, naked men rushing about a smoke-filled room, no way to get out. My heart and my eyes ached.

Drink Victim Last.

"I saw a man lying on a bed. He was intoxicated and was no better off than when he had come in two hours before. I don't think he ever got out. All I could do for him was to pull him off the bed on to the floor and try to rouse him, but it was no use. I fell over some men who were on the floor. When I got on to the roof I found that in the excitement I had not put on my street clothes. I dressed myself later.

"There was a panic on the fire escapes below us. I saw men jump. It was terrible."

PLUNGED TO PAVEMENT IN EFFORT TO LEAP TO LADDER

Theodore Crockett, a piper hanger and one of the survivors, was among those who escaped across a frail plank bridge laid from the roof of the lodging house to the top of a nearby building.

"I was sleeping on the fifth floor when I awoke with the room filled with smoke," said Crockett. "Great clouds of smoke were coming up the stairway and I knew that I could not escape by that exit.

"I grabbed my clothes without getting a chance to put them on and commenced to awaken the men nearest me. Some of the men jumped out of bed, but others refused to leave their cots and are, I suppose, dead. I shook the man who was sleeping next to me and told him of the fire. He told me to go to hell.

"By this time the concrete floor was so hot that I could hardly stand on it. With about twenty other men we tried to get down the front stairs. We found this impossible, so we made our way to the roof.

"The flames, by the way, had cut off the fire escapes and not a ladder was within our reach. One man leaped for a ladder, missed it and crashed to the pavements. After that I didn't see anyone try to jump. We ran about the room without any clothing and finally someone suggested that we try to jump to the next house.

"It was too far, however, and then we found some planks and boards that were used to hold the clothes line. We tore these boards down with our bare hands and threw them across the alley to the next building. There was a great rush to get across, but the first who started back as the cords began to bend, they were so weak.

"Then we placed some planking under the thin boards and in this way made our bridge safe. We first allowed the older men to cross this improvised bridge. The younger men held their hands until they had nearly reached the middle of the small bridge. I think the distance between the two buildings was about ten feet.

"It is my opinion that the watchman was not awake. Had he been awake he would have discovered the fire. He was probably sleeping, as it was early in the morning."

WATER MAIN BURSTS DURING FIRE AND FLOODS CELLARS

While the fire was at its height, a 12-inch water main burst in Waltham street, near Ringgold street, South End, tore a hole eight feet square in the asphalt pavement and flooded the cellars of houses for nearly two blocks. Dirt and gravel were distributed over the sidewalk as a geyser inundated the streets.

The break in the main is said to have been caused by the erection of the high pressure sent through the pipes to supply water to the engines and occurred at a point which burst under similar circumstances three years ago. The emergency crew of the water department arrived a few minutes later, closed the valves and shut off the water supply of the neighborhood.

SAYS NIGHT CLERK WAS NOT IN OFFICE WHEN FIRE STARTED

Warren Crowell, eighteen, who dozed in a chair on the office ear of the Arcadia Lodging House, because he had no room of a bed, claims that Night Clerk James Walsh and Night Watchman Arthur McGlynn were not in the office as they claimed, when the fire started. He said:

"I had been sleeping at the Arcadia for some time, but last night I did not get a bed there, because I spent all my money—75 cents—for a pair of second-hand shoes. I have been working at the Grand Opera House, next door to the lodging house, for Joseph Joseph Murphy, the scenic artist at the theatre. Before that I had been employed by James H. Proctor at Hamilton, Mass. I had ridden his horses. For some years I had made my home at the House of the Angel Guardian.

"I went to the Arcadia about midnight. The night clerk allowed me to sit in a chair. I was pretty sleepy, but feared to drop off to sleep as I might have been put out into the street.

"I would shut my eyes for a moment and then open them again as I got very sleepy. On opening my eyes, I noticed that it was getting dark. Then I smelled smoke. No one was in the office. I was alone. It surprised me not to find the night clerk or night watchman there.

"I shrieked 'fire.' Then I ran to the foot of the stairs leading to the floors above and shouted 'fire' at the top of my voice. I couldn't get down the stairs as the flames and smoke filled the space. The window was my only chance. I got onto the fire escape and made my way to the street. I guess that I was the first one out. But I did not see the night clerk or the night watchman."

SURVIVOR TELLS OF LEAP FOR LIFE AND SLIDE DOWN LADDER

Frank Parker told the following story of his escape.

"I was asleep on the top floor. I should think there were about fifty men asleep on that floor with me. I was awakened by a man falling on me. It turned out he walked on me by accident he was in such a hurry to get out.

"I hustled in a hurry to the window and crawled out on the coping. There were thirty or forty men there ahead of me and there wasn't room for another man after I got there. I saw quite a few jump. The firemen finally raised a ladder, but it went to the floor above us and we could not reach it.

"I thought sure I was gone, for I did not dare to jump and the fire behind was getting too hot I could not stay there much longer. Finally someone on the coping jumped right out into the air and grabbed a rung on the ladder.

"I did the same. I caught the ladder all right and made my way down on the underneath side of the ladder. There were a lot more going down the ladder the same time I was. I slipped the last part of the way and it took all the flesh off my leg."

SAW MAN, DRIVEN MAD BY HEAT, RUSH TO DEATH IN FLAMES

The story of how one of the men was driven mad and rushed into the flames was told by James Doran, a lodger:

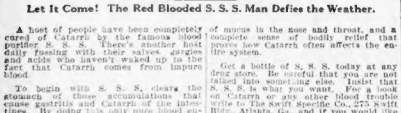
"I was awakened," said Doran, "by the cry, 'get out, get out; there is a fire.' I jumped from my bunk and saw many others scrambling out of bed. I pulled several men who were still asleep from their bunks.

"As I was running toward the rear of the fifth floor I noticed a man named Murphy fall. I grabbed him in my arms and ran to the Washington street window. I looked below and saw a life net stretched out. I raised Murphy and threw him out of the window. He landed in the net and escaped. I learned later, with only a cut over one of his eyes.

"Soon after this I noticed a man who had evidently been driven crazy by the heat, rushed wildly into the flames at the head of the stairway. For a second his progress was halted. I tried to reach him but the flames drove me back. He then fell to the floor, probably unconscious. A minute after his body was a mass of flames and soon he was enveloped in smoke.

Catarrh Hurts More Than Is Realized

For Weak, Watery Eyes, to Cure Deafness, Sore Throat, Lame Kidneys, Weak Chest—Here's the Remedy.



Let It Come! The Red Blooded S. S. S. Man Defies the Weather.

A host of people have been completely cured of Catarrh by the famous blood purifier S. S. S. There's another host daily passing with their salves, sprays and acids who haven't waked up to the fact that Catarrh comes from impure blood.

To begin with S. S. S. clears the stomach of those accumulations that cause gastritis and Catarrh of the intestines. By doing this it purifies the blood before the lungs. Pure blood is thus supplied to the entire body. It requires pure blood to get the maximum out of the eyes; pure blood must be supplied to the delicate machinery of the ears, likewise the kidneys and all other parts of the body, all of which are made up of a myriad of tiny cells and all surrounded by a network of small vessels. Catarrh is in these cells and these interlacings of blood vessels that S. S. S. goes its work. The entire blood supply is thus inoculated with the antiseptic medicinal virtues of S. S. S. Thus, instead of the abnormal secretions of mucus spreading further inflammatory influences into the kidneys, the lungs, the throat and bronchial tubes, watering the eyes, plugging the ears and causing a constant dribbling at the nose, the membranes regain their natural color and moistened with healthy lubricants.

It has been fully demonstrated that in S. S. S. there is one ingredient that preserves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to select from the blood its own required nutriment. And this activity includes the membranes and the structural tissues of the body.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of frontal headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, the disappearance of thick lumps of mucus in the nose and throat, and a delightful sense of health. Relief improves how Catarrh often affects the entire system.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. today at any drug store. Be careful that you are not talked into something else. Insist that S. S. S. is what you want. TUDOR TEA THE BEST

Love Story of Harry and Evelyn Thaw

CHAPTER LXXXVI.

"Who saw him die?"
"I," said the Fly,
"With my little eye,
I saw him die."
—Mother Goose.

The law does not ask how long a man was insane. It finds out if the man was insane, and, if he was, he could not be held responsible. A man might be emotionally insane and never have a renewal of it. On the other hand, after having been overcome by it once, he would be liable to be weaker under a strain of like magnitude than he was originally. That is he would give in to it quicker.

You know, I am not saying that Thaw's counsel is to advance a plea of insanity as a defence. I am merely discussing emotional insanity with you.

Regarding Mrs. Harry Thaw—there has been a lot of newspaper talk of Mrs. Thaw being a little, shallow, butterfly thing. That is another result of people going into a courtroom and filling their morbid ideas to the people before them.

Mrs. Harry Thaw is one of the best-poised women I ever met. She is not a girl. She is a woman. She is intellectually bright and has an unusually clear method of reasoning.

"She is intuitive. Yes, and more than that, she is of a high plane of intellectuality. She is well read and she has thought deeply on what she has read and what she has seen.

"I have the highest respect for Mrs. Harry Thaw, both as a woman and as an intellectual brain, with which to discuss the details of the case as they came up.

Evelyn Not Frivolous.

"She was here in this very room (Delmas' office) about two weeks ago and we talked for an entire afternoon. I think it is hardly fair to call her a little, frivolous girl. I don't know, of course, what she was like before this affair came up, but now she is a woman, mature in her suffering, well poised and self-contained.

"Suffer? Of course she suffers. Every energy which she possesses is lent to liberate Harry Thaw.

"Mrs. William Thaw? Ah, she is a fine woman, a woman to look at whom did me good, as she came here day after day and watched the selection of the jurors who are to try her son.

"She doesn't wear any veil. She comes there with her face uncovered. She has nothing to be ashamed of and she does not fear to show her face.

Mrs. William Thaw is the finest type of the old school of American women, staunchly standing by her mankind through all their troubles, bravely bearing her own pain, ready to suffer more if need be.

I think we have gotten a jury that represents intelligent, reasonable men of a high order of understanding, and that the fate of Harry Thaw rests safely in their hands. We are all of us very much pleased with the jury.

Yes, I know it took a long time to get them together, but you must remember that it is a case involving a great deal of money and well known people and perhaps there are men who would want to be excused for that reason. Then, too, there were a good half of them who were challenged by either the defense or the prosecution.

Delmas' remarks about Evelyn's brain power were recalled later, after the girl had subjected herself to a record-breaking examination and cross-examination, and had parried the severest and shrewdest thrust of Jerome in hours of verbal fencing.

* * * *

Everyone was looking forward by this time to the third week of the trial and the beginning of testimony.

There would be the opening for the State, probably made by Assistant District Attorney Garvan, followed by the State's first witnesses.

All Jerome planned to do with his opening address was to show the jury, a thing that hardly needed proof.

Then it would be up to the defence to justify Thaw's act.

To Be Continued.

'A THOUSAND YEARS AGO' AT THE SHUBERT

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Poetry and romance, fantastic draperies and fanciful coverings brought the old world of a thousand years ago to the Shubert Theatre last evening. It was Persian romance of long ago shown in its best dress and acted by players who knew how to read Peter MacKaye's blank verse. "A Thousand Years Ago" was a bewildering and fascinating series of pictures in Oriental settings of strangely weird but agreeable design.

As if Mr. MacKaye half believed that real romance is dead he devoted much of his story to a repeated suggestion that romance is very much alive. If you followed the quest of his two leading characters you were compelled to concede that the romance of the stage never had a more glorious fling—a sort of an all-evening spree in cause of love. That Mr. MacKaye made his story interesting might have been due to his skill in keeping his poetry from drifting toward the deadly brand of blank verse. As the fantastic colors that were held before you pleased your eye, so was the text soothing to your ear. Not a little of this, of course, may be attributed to art of the actor in his reading. With H. Cooper Cliffe and Fredrick Warde doing heavy service all evening, the old school came back to its own.

Like "Casket Scene."

Mr. MacKaye's subject matter was selected from the same Persian tale from which Shakespeare drew his casket scene in "The Merchant of Venice," and with slight variations the incident was used as a pivot for the play. You found the beautiful and romantic Chinese princess, Turandot, beset by princely suitors who failed to arouse any emotion in her breast. The gentle creature gave them the choice of correctly answering three riddles and winning her hand, or losing their heads. The walls of Pekin were decorated with many heads. There were nine winners up to the time of Calaf's arrival.

The beggar, Calaf, with curly hair and a lovely blonde beard, crossed Turandot's path. It was the sweet old story—love at first sight. Calaf, by the way, was not a regular beggar—he was merely a discarded prince out of a job. Naturally he burst into the contest for Turandot's hand, but he carelessly removed the beard and put on new clothes. The princes would have none of him. Her heart beat furiously for the beggar she thought Calaf, but not for the silken clad Romeo that walked right up to her riddles and answered them with his eyes shut. For two acts you had Turandot and Calaf quarrelling just like married people. There was continuous rough weather in the palace.

Fascinating Romance.

But you forget old Capicomico, the wandering play-actor from Italy—the original ancestor of Mr. Fix It. He turned loose secrets and brushed away the clouds. And then there was a happy curtain on two lovers folded in each other's arms.

The Capicomico of H. Cooper Cliffe was perhaps the most subsect work of the performances, although Rita Jolivet made the Chinese princess a lady of lovely and varied emotions. Frederick Wardle was impressive as the Emperor of China, and Jerome Patrick spread his love-making over the performance like a perfectly trained Oriental. John Drew when the latter was in his prime as a dashing juvenile.

"A Thousand Years Ago" was a fascinating romance of many delightfully tabloided scenes, told in poetry that was easy to hear.

MISS LEONA M. FULLER of Charlestown, whose friends hope to see hailed the winner in the Typical American Girl Contest.

Five more days for the Typical American Girl. Five more days to discover the one girl, who has the eyes, hair, forehead, form and disposition of the girl, who most typifies New England and America.

Will she be blond, or will she be a pronounced brunette? Will she have beautiful features, or will she be plain with an expression that shows a strong character, with a love of outdoor sports, freedom, independence, and womanly ideals of patriotism? No one can tell, and no one up to the present has the remotest idea who will be chosen by the three judges, who have kindly offered their services in this most difficult of tasks.

There will be hundreds of pictures to examine, and if one hundred more come in each of the remaining days there will be half a thousand more.

New England has representatives from every State and from dozens of towns and cities, but there are localities that are yet without representation and should come in before the week is up.

Photographers who have many fine examples of New England girls in their studio books are requested to send in their best—with, of course, the permission of the girls. Such pictures will be credited to the photographer and should be succeed in supplying the typical girl, there will be valuable advertising for him.

The prize, which will be presented to the "Typical American Girl" when she is selected by the judges in this great contest, will be a life-size oil portrait of herself, painted by a noted New England artist, from personal sittings.

MRS. BARRY LEADS BOSTON EGG PRICE WAR

"Every woman in Boston should refuse to buy eggs until the prices are lowered to bring them within the reach of persons of ordinary means," today declared Mrs. Edward P. Barry, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor-elect, and leader of the Boston women who have declared war on the egg trust.

"It is an outrage that poor people are forced to pay such exorbitant prices for eggs. Cost of living is now intolerably high and bids fair to go still higher. Something must be done to check the tremendous increases in the cost of necessities.

"Eggs are a necessity to a proper diet, and the government should act to prevent imposition upon the poor. It is the duty of housewives to declare a boycott on eggs until those who control the supply can be brought to terms."

A nation-wide boycott is to be declared, according to the present plans of women of Boston and other cities. Their boycott pledges are then to be forwarded to Congress, with the request that action be taken to prevent artificial stimulation of the prices of eggs in the future.

Chamber Urges Early Shopping

The Boston Chamber of Commerce is lending its influence to the "shop early" campaign. Thousands of letters have been sent by the chamber to merchants setting forth the advantages to public and to business of the "Shop Early" method. They were asked to post placards about their shops with the "Shop Early" slogan set forth, and to use the phrase in all their advertisements.

Paul C. Cummings of the Chamber of Commerce said today:

"I need not go into the merits of the case—what 'Shop Early' means to the shoppers themselves, to the business man, and lastly, but not least, to the overworked girl, the weary cashier, the bookkeeper, the expressman, the thousands of people for whom the holiday season has become something to be dreaded, rather than hailed with joy. Everybody can do something toward stopping this holiday strain, and be himself the gainer.

The Biggest Holiday Business In Your History

How to Get It!

Suppose you had just twenty-four hours left in which to make your appeal for Christmas business.

You'd waste no time in contemplation.

You'd write an advertisement today.

You'd put all your energy and conviction into your words, and you'd print them in the biggest space you could afford.

You'd use a newspaper which went into the homes.

You'd aim to reach the progressive, gift-giving people of Boston—the people to whom Christmas means most.

Project this same energy and advertising enthusiasm forward to THE NOW.

TODAY is the time to act—to convert gift-giving ideas into action by reasonable, seasonable sales suggestions in the Boston American.

For, remember, the readers of this newspaper are early buyers. Give them as many gift suggestions now as you intended later. AND KEEP ON GIVING THEM!

Bear in mind that these people will spend at least Sixteen Million Dollars on Christmas gifts alone this season. In addition, their regular living expenses per month easily approximate Thirty-two Million Dollars. All told—$48,000,000.

Both figures are conservative estimates based on the Boston American's daily circulation, and allow only $80 per family as the monthly expenditure for necessities, and $40 for Christmas gifts.

FORTY-EIGHT MILLIONS in December is a conservative estimate. And every dollar subject to the influence of Boston American advertising!

A fair share of this will be yours if you go after it AT ONCE.

TODAY IS THE DAY FOR ACTION.

HOW DID 'PRIMITIVE MAN' KNOWLES KILL THAT BEAR IN MAINE?

IT IS THE BIG THING "DOC COOK" DOES NOT TELL PEOPLE IN HIS LECTURES.

naked man in the woods. He needed protection from the elements. He needed food.

The killing of the bear is the keystone of his story as IT WAS THE PRIME NECESSITY OF HIS EARLY DAYS IN THE WOODS. The killing of a bear by a naked unarmed man in the woods was the one big thing that stood out to give a brand-new kind of a thrill to civilized people.

It is the one big thing that people want to hear from Knowles' own lips. It is the one big thing that Knowles is NOT telling them.

To those who have read Knowles' newspaper stories his present-day lecture is especially INTERESTING READING CHIEFLY FOR WHAT KNOWLES DOES NOT SAY about his life in the woods. The Daily AMERICAN will print in three installments Knowles' talk at Bangor just as he gave it without one word changed. Here is the first installment:

WHAT KNOWLES SAID AT BANGOR.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

This is a great pleasure—to come to this town, or city rather, in my own native State, and have an opportunity of talking to you. I imagine you would like to hear me say something concerning my life in the wilderness of Northern Maine. I think there are many who are interested in this experiment and my life in the woods. None of them, no man as yet has asked me: "Why did you go into the woods and attempt such an unusual thing?" They have never asked me that. Nearly all the questions that have been asked me in regard to my experiment have been questions along the methods, along the way of my life.

First, I will tell you the reason why I went into the woods. It was an idea of my own, and not an idea suggested to me. No newspaper backed me in any way. No syndicate stood behind me. I wanted to know—and this was my main reason—if a man could be self-sustaining here in Maine, could stand alone. I could not think of any better place to go for that than back to nature.

Sought Game License.

Before attempting this experiment I applied to the game commissioners of this State for permission to kill such animals as I needed. My application was supported by many men of importance all over this country, by Governors of States, by Mayors of cities; and, in fact, since I have come out of the woods I had a letter, which is now in my files, from the President of the United States, a letter of appreciation of my effort in the woods.

This application was refused me and in answer to the letter I wrote, this letter came. It reads something like this:

"Mr. Knowles—In view of the fact that there are so many stories concerning your experiment, that so many may be published in some newspaper, and as we do not care for newspaper publicity, we cannot see our way clear to grant you this permission."

I had been nearly a year considering this; had gone over it; had seriously thought of it, and I could not find a stumbling block. I talked with my friends who knew outdoor life. They all agreed with me. They could not see any stumbling block.

I felt the experiment would be worth while for my personal satisfaction, regardless of what the public thought or what interest they might take in it. I was perfectly satisfied in my own mind that if a man could be self-sustaining it would help me in my line of work. I was fifteen years behind in my line of work.

Details Overlooked.

I cannot tell much about that, because I have but a short time to talk with you. The best I can do under the present conditions is to touch upon what I think may be the most important points concerning this trip of mine. The moving pictures will tell what I do not tell. I always forget to tell something. When I get outside with my friends, they say: "Why didn't you say so and so?" I am going to just try to touch on the most important parts in the limited time I have with you here. I will then take up some of the pictures taken after we left Megantic.

Well, I won't go into detail to tell you all. The real thing that I went into the woods for is what I would like to talk about. But the public want to know the methods of living, regardless of what I had in mind, regardless of what I saw or felt, regardless of what I learned, regardless of what the educational benefits may be. The public want to know what I ate.

"How did you catch the deer?" "How did you catch fish?" "How did you skin the deer?" "How did you get along without salt?" "How did you build your first fire?" "Didn't you suffer a great deal?"

These are the questions that are asked. It almost makes me laugh when people say: "You must have suffered!" "You must have suffered mentally!" Yes, some, I did. I missed the sound of human voices. The physical suffering was absolutely nothing compared with the mental state. I knew where everything was in the woods. I was used to the woods.

Nature's Open Book.

I was born in a little clearing up in the northern part of the State. I learned my lessons from the open book of nature. I did not have the opportunity of going to school and studying books that were printed and written by other men. And while I am speaking of books written by other men, I must tell you this. It should interest you. Books written by people should be studied by men who have seen outdoor life, have seen the live animals and how they live. Parties of writers have gone back to live in camps, in the most humble circumstances as conditions would permit. They, however, had guides; they had comforts. They wrote stories of what they had seen while they lived there.

They wrote stories that they heard from the trappers, of what they had seen and done. These trappers had not been educated, but they could give the men facts, and these fireside writers wrote the stories. These are the stories that have brought fear into the hearts of children, have filled them with a fear of nature, a fear of darkness and the forest, and of the things that should be most friendly to them.

From my own experience I cannot believe that the wild animals we read about should be feared. They crave human companionship. You start a deer. If she does not run away at once, she will watch you. If you do something so she knows you are there, she will stand out of curiosity and watch you. If you continue what you are doing the deer see that you are not going to hurt her.

Survival of Fittest.

We must believe some things that we do not see, because we know they exist. There is one thing we do not see that I know exists—animal instinct. We understand one another. We are animals. Deer are animals. The connection between these wild animals and man being what it is, if the man walks away without looking at the deer she knows the man does not intend to harm her. She will then come again. If that man lives along in his neck of woods and does not disturb her, she will come again, and this is the nature of other animals. Birds also will grow tame and eat out of your hands.

There are many things that I never noticed before that I noticed on this trip, because I had the time. Speaking of noticing things, I want to speak of one thing especially. It is the survival of the fittest shown even in the lowest form of vegetable life, the survival of the fittest in the forest.

I will begin with some small plants of vegetable life in the woods. Well, I saw in the woods the green shoots of life that had only been growing for one year. This was the case in pine growth, and especialy in hardwood growth. These little shoots had grown up and in the distance they looked like a soft green carpet. The mother trees protected these trees in the forest, but how many of these trees, of these little shoots will grow and be there in after years. Some of them must be torn away.

Must Have Room to Grow.

Those that are to live must have space. They must have space to get room to grow, to have a chance at the sun and light and wind. The deer will eat some of them; other animals will eat some of them. One out of a thousand may grow and finally become a tree. While that tree is growing, another bigger tree will fall down, and by decaying will help that little tree grow. That tree will be growing near another one, and they will wrangle together as to which tree will survive and each tree will try to push the other out of the way.

And that is exactly what happens. I saw this thing while I was on this trip. One tree gets the most sunlight and thrusts the other into the shade. This makes the first tree grow larger and larger.

To jump from trees to animal life. Take one of the smallest animals in the woods, say the mink. Running up the stream, he catches a bird, a partridge. He kills the partridge. He has caught something, has killed something, and it is his. While he is there, feeling something as a man who had gone into the woods—killed a deer with a gun—another animal larger than the mink, say a wildcat, comes along. He cannot drive that animal away. It kills him perhaps and takes the bird away.

Thus along comes a larger animal and commences to prey on the smaller animal until the human being comes in and with a rifle kills his game. That shows the survival of the fittest through the vegetable and animal life.

It Is to Laugh.

That is one thing that I learned. But it is only one among a great many. There are scientific and educational benefits in the things I learned. By connecting my experiences with my knowledge before I went into the woods I find they are going to be of some value to people less fortunate than I was. When people say to me: "This is a wonderful thing that you have done," it almost makes me laugh. It is not a wonderful thing. I did not go into the woods to come out and tell you how wonderful I am. I am not wonderful. I am just the same as you are. What I learned of the woods by this trip, another—any man can learn.

Why is it a wonderful thing? It cannot be wonderful if anyone else can do it. I know they can. You may hear some man say: "It can't be done!" If you see that man, ask him about his own experiences, his own work. You will find, you will see, that he is not successful in his life. If a man makes up his mind to do anything he will get there, and no power can hold him back, nothing can stop him but death.

But to tell you about how I went into the woods, if any one of the people would like to know. I will jump back to the time I went in, the fourth day of August. On the fourth day of August, in the forest on the shores of Big Spencer Lake, I left my friends. I also left my clothing on the shore of the lake, and I neglected to take seventy-five cents from my trousers pocket.

Entering the Forest.

By the way, when I returned I failed to find that seventy-five cents there. It must have dropped out of the pocket some time, for it wasn't there when I came out. After leaving my friends I entered into the forest. I walked down the shore upon the right to a beaver dam, walked across the beaver dam, and started into a spruce thicket. I walked until I felt sleepy, and then lay down and fell asleep. When I woke up I walked around again. And that walking took thirty-one pounds of flesh off me—flesh that I had put on while I was living in the city, eating everything, flesh put on in civilized living. I had put on sixty-one pounds. I lost thirty-one pounds, and I don't want it back again.

More of Knowles' own story as told in his lecture will be printed in tomorrow's AMERICAN.

Don't forget! Another instalment of the biggest story ever printed in any newspaper—The TRUTH ABOUT KNOWLES, OR THE DOCTOR COOK OF THE MAINE WOODS—WILL BE PRINTED IN NEXT SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

Auto News

The Massachusetts Automobile Club is making preparations to take possession of its new clubhouse at the corner of Stuart and Clarendon streets about the middle of the present month. This building is about completed, it having been constructed especially for the use and requirements of the Massachusetts Automobile Club.

The clubhouse on Boylston street, which has been the home of the organization for the last nine or ten years, will be vacated and in the future will serve for other uses than the home of an automobile club. This clubhouse was virtually the first building devoted to motor vehicles to be located on Boylston street south of Trinity Square and while an admirable structure for automobile purposes, it must necessarily be remodeled to meet business requirements.

The club officers are making extensive preparations for the proper dedication of their new clubhouse, a special committee having been appointed to arrange for the same.

H. T. Myers of the Boston branch of the Studebaker Corporation returned on Monday after a three-weeks' vacation in the West. During his absence from Boston, Mr. Myers made an extended tour through the Middle West, visiting his old college at Lexington, Ky., and renewing acquaintances with the men of his school days.

Mr Myers said yesterday that the business prospects were exceedingly bright and that his trip developed no indications of a tightening of business conditions.

Manager Charles E. Fay of the Ford Motor Company's Boston branch is making numerous trips through New England, visiting his agents and looking over the field with an experienced eye. Mr. Fay is particularly busy these days taking care of his extensive business as well as keeping a watchful eye upon the erection of his new service station across the Cottage Farms Bridge in Cambridge.

This service station will, when completed, be a veritable automobile assembling plant and will give to the Boston branch facilities unequaled in the East. The granite columns, which are to be found at the main entrance to the building, are about the only old thing in the structure. These pillars are of historic value, having years ago formed part and parcel of the old Tremont House, they being the identical pillars that gave dignity to the old hostelry.

Make this Family Supply of Cough Syrup at Home and Save $2.

This plan makes a pint of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer an ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough quickly. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and keeps a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative, too, which is helpful. A handy remedy for hoarseness, spasmodic croup, bronchitis, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

The effect of pine on the membranes is well known. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup remedy has often been imitated, though never successfully. It is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Democrats Push Currency Bill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Without formal action the Democrats of the Senate put into operation the drastic program they have adopted for the consideration of the administration currency bill. The Republicans, after two hours of debate, prevented a vote on a motion calling for continuous sessions of the Senate daily.

C. J. Bullock Scores Income Tax Law

"The income tax as it now stands can bring little but trouble; prominent people will have to stew for a while till public sentiment gets so strong Washington will have to listen to it. The administration there now would not listen, I think, to any suggestions," Charles J. Bullock of Harvard told the Massachusetts Reform Club.

Latest in Today's Stock Markets

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks ruled higher this afternoon, the early improvement having been well maintained. Boston & Maine was off 1¾ at 65¾ in the Boston market, after having sold down to 45. New Haven at 79¾ was up 1¾. United Fruit and American Telephone were each up ½. Fitchburg preferred was off 6¾ at 77 and Edison was down ¼ at 245. Coal issues were irregular. Quincy was a point lower and there was a small loss for Mohawk, while Granby and North Butte were fractionally higher.

New York gains included Canadian Pacific ½, Northern Pacific ¼, Union Pacific ¾, Reading ⅝, American Can ⅝, Steel ⅝, Amalgamated ½, New Haven 1¾ and Erie ⅝.

Market Firm at the Start.

The New York market opened firm and with most issues ranging higher. Most of the active railroads made gains, although statistics as to October earnings were unfavorable. Decreases in net will have a great deal of weight with the Interstate Commerce Commission in deciding the petition for higher freight rates, traders believe.

The tone was better than it had been before this week. Most commentators thought that President Wilson's message could be construed in a bullish sense, although regrets were expressed that the market must suffer longer from dread as to what he will say specifically about legislation needed to cure or regulate great industrial combines.

London Not a Factor.

London was not much of a factor in transactions in American markets, international being very dull abroad and irregular as to price. Early strength of New Haven was in a measure due to scarcity of the loan supply. It sold as high as 79½ during the first hour and before afternoon had touched 80. Buying of Erie continued to a degree that attracted attention and was accompanied by circulation of odd rumors as to a change in the road's control. It is a scarce stock now. Important interests are said to have been accumulating it, not only in this country, but in Europe, where it is held in especial esteem as to future earning possibilities.

While the market remained firm all the morning and over the noon period business was very quiet and not half the volume of yesterday. There was little range to prices.

The money market remained quiet and the only quotable change in time rates in New York was a reduction of ¾ to 4% per cent. in the bid for four months. The tendency of call money seemed downward.

Three per cent. French rentes touched their lowest record price on the Paris bourse, the price dropping to 88f. 75c. This was due to the riffeat of the Barthou cabinet because of its denial of upon the exemption of government bonds from taxation. The price had recovered to 89f. 2½c. at 3.

Boston & Maine Still Weaker.

The sagging of Boston & Maine was the feature of the Boston market, it selling as low as 65, or off 2¾, during the first hour. Later it made a partial recovery. Local trading was quiet and most of the issues were given support and prices ranged upward. Edison weakened considerably and sold at the lowest price in several years after stockholders voted to issue 22,750 additional shares at $215 a share at the postponed annual meeting.

The issue has the approval of the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners. The new shares will be offered in the ratio of one new share for each eight shares now held. Quincy was also a minus issue, its directors having deferred the dividend declaration now due because of strike conditions at the property. New Haven was strengthened by reports from Washington that the road's management and federal authorities would soon reach an amicable understanding.

Financial News in Brief.

The London copper warrants market opened steady, spot and futures each being up 2s., 6d. At the close spot was unchanged and futures had declined 2s., 6d. more. Sales were 300 tons "of" spot and 100 of future.

It is now believed that the estate of the late Anthony N. Brady will exceed $100,000,000.

One of the latest estimates regarding earnings of the United States Steel Corporation for the last quarter of this year is that they will fall below $30,000,000. This is cutting previous estimates by $2,000,000.

Northern Pacific's net revenue decreased $340,214 in October and the shrinkage in operating income was $378,-344. During that month New York, Ontario & Western's net earnings decreased $49,008, while the operating income of the Rutland road decreased $14,826.

Washington statistics report that for October the net operating revenue of fifty-six roads decreased $4,352,540. Net income of Chesapeake and Ohio lines decreased $61,234. The net operating income of the Louisville & Nashville increased $310,273.

Shannon copper output for November was 1,110,000 pounds compared with 1,-210,000 pounds in October and 1,430,000 pounds in November a year ago.

Gross sales for November of Sears, Roebuck & Co. were $9,341,000, an increase of 6.78 per cent.; for eleven months the gross sales of the concern aggregate $85,930,035, a gain of 14.27 per cent.

The estimate of the National Ginners' Association as to this season's cotton crop is said to be 13,600,000 bales, exclusive of linters.

FACT AND COMMENT IN FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

President Wilson's decision to postpone attacking "Big Business" is at once gratifying and significant. It means that the efforts of this and other newspapers to lay the serious facts before the administration have not been in vain. It means that the President is not too obsessed with anti-corporation mania to realize the necessity for acting cautiously.

"For this relief, much thanks," was the keynote of statements made privately and publicly by leading financiers after reading the message.

* * *

The only passage dealing with trust legislation reads:

"The immediate service we owe the business communities of the country is to prevent private monopoly more effectually than it has yet been prevented. I think it will be easily agreed that we should let the Sherman anti-trust law stand unaltered as it is, with its debatable ground about it, but that we should as much as possible reduce the area of that debatable ground by further and more explicit legislation; and should also supplement that great act by legislation which will not only clarify it, but also facilitate its administration and make it fairer to all concerned."

* * *

"No doubt we shall all wish, and the country will expect, this to be the central subject of our deliberations during the present session; but it is a subject so many-sided and so deserving of careful and discriminating discussion that I shall take the liberty of addressing you upon it in a special message at a later date.

"It is of capital importance that the business men of this country should be relieved of all uncertainties of law with regard to their enterprises and investments and a clear path indicated which they can travel without anxiety.

"It is as important that they should be relieved of embarrassment and set free to prosper as that private monopoly should be destroyed. The ways of action should be thrown wide open."

Are the public aware that America is not being properly developed largely, if not entirely, because of uncertainty over the government's attitude toward important enterprises?

Do the working classes realize that if capital is kept on tenter hooks much longer employment will become distressingly scarce?

New avenues of development must be constantly opened up if the United States is to provide work for the half million or more immigrants that flock to her shores every year, to say nothing of those already here.

To hit capital may be an exhilarating sport—for a while. But when capital retreats workers are thrown out of jobs.

Several years ago I made the comment, since widely quoted that in Europe conspicuously successful men are knighted, but here they are indicted.

President Wilson and Congress could render America no greater service than to "clarify" the Sherman law, excavate a clear path for courageous business men and set them "free to prosper."

INSTEAD OF MANIFESTING FIENDISH VINDICTIVENESS REGARDING THE PAST OPERATIONS OF THE AVERAGE CORPORATION WOULD IT NOT BE MORE USEFUL AND EQUALLY SALUTARY TO PRESCRIBE CLEAR-CUT RULES FOR THE FUTURE AND INFLICT JAIL SENTENCES UPON OFFENDERS?

If I Ate That I Would Die

You Will Never Fear Food If You Go to a Dinner Carrying One Little Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet.

You needn't pass up all those savory dishes just because you are afraid of what the stomach will say to them. Armed with a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, you can bid defiance to the most cantankerous stomach and be assured that your food will be perfectly digested in spite of the stomach's objections.

"At Every Banquet You Will Always See Some Person Who Is Afraid of Food."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a compound of pepsin, and those elements that must be secreted by the stomach if the food is to be digested. When the stomach fails to secrete enough of these digestive agencies, the only sane remedy is to supply a sufficient quantity of these elements to digest the food. This is the service for which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets were made and they are recommended by leading doctors and scientists. One or two of these cablets is sufficient to digest the largest dinner. They stop almost instantly all forms of indigestion, such as sour stomach, belching, heartburn, dizziness, brash and dysentery. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain digestive elements, a single grain of which is capable of digesting 3,000 grains of food, such as meats, eggs, grains, vegetables, starches and mineral matters of all kinds.

If your stomach is sluggish or worn out, let Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do your digesting for you until the stomach can recuperate. Give it a little vacation. It has a hard enough struggle at the best, with all you put in it. And even when your stomach is in perfect condition, you will occasionally need one after a big banquet or other social affair that taxes your stomach to the uttermost.

Make Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets the ever-ready friend and assistant to your stomach. Get a 50c box of your druggist today.

NATIONAL LEAGUE MEETING IN NEW YORK EXPECTED TO BE VERY QUIET AFFAIR

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

LIVELY BASEBALL GOSSIP IN WINTER LEAGUE CIRCLES: NEWS OF THE GOLF LINKS

N. L. SESSION THREATENED BY PEACE STIGMA

By DAMON RUNYON.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—It appears that a new and novel spectacle is about to be presented in this city in the form of a peaceful meeting of the magnats of the dear old National League. That is, it promises to be peaceful. There is no issue in sight at the present moment but there is yet time to locate an issue and thus save the famous organization from the stigma of a quiet session.

It is feared, however, that the old league has come upon evil days in regard to acrimony. While it has yet to hold a calm and collected meeting there is every reason to believe that it is entering upon an era of quietude that will make the annual gatherings scarcely worth notice.

The recent infusion of new blood is responsible for this grave change. Messrs. Hempstead, Gaffney, Dyke and Britton are temperamentally in accord with President Wilson. They like their peace and quiet. They do not believe in armed intervention. They are willing to gather in one room and transact a lot of business without calling each other liars.

Shades of Hyrace Fogel, what a condition of affairs!

Of course the peaceful meeting has not yet been held, and Charles Hercules Ebbets is still a member of the National League, though by no means a still member, and as long as we may Ebbets we have hope.

Tener's Election on Schedule.

About the most important business to be transacted by the league at the coming quiet meeting is the election of John K. Tener as president at a salary of $25,000 a year. This is the standard baseball salary for all presidents, managers, rumors and players. Mr. Tener will get $25,000 a year, because the magnats could not pay him any less under the new rules.

There used to be a time when baseball salaries were only $10,000, and that was the average price of ball players, but as baseball has steadily advanced, so too, have salaries. Can you think of any instance lately where money was mentioned in connection with the national pastime other than the amount was any less than $25,000? You cannot. You cannot, because there is no such instance on record.

We do not say Mr. Tener will not receive $25,000. Quite the contrary, we say positively he will receive $25,000. Because it is well known that a baseball man cannot even think in terms of less than $25,000.

Couldn't Resist Pressure.

Mr. Tener will be worth whatever they pay him. As we understand it, he did not seek the job. The job sought him. The job hunted him up at his home address, and got down on its knees, and prayed that he accept it. The job had a delegation of National League magnats with it, and Mr. Tener naturally could not resist the pressure.

It is to be noted that a four-year term seems to be the job which will be ample time for Mr. Tener to bear everything that a retired magnat and manager can take grandeur whenever he renders a decision favorable to said magnat and manager. Mr. Tener is going to be very busy, as well by the flimsy of some of the magnats and managers, too, before he gets through with his job.

And Lynch, what?

Is Tener's job Lynch may be asked to send the National League is probably groundless. If the retiring chief of the National were asked to take the outlaw job, he would probably reject it, unless they showed him a lot of money. Lynch has won too closely identified with organized baseball to break the tie easily, although baseball finds no place for sentiment in dealing with Thomas J. Lynch.

Connie Mack remains, the dean of baseball managers, might use Lynch to succeed Joe Tinker. Garry has tried baseball executives, coachers, assistant stops, and about everything else, so there is no reason why he should not experiment with an ex-president.

DARTMOUTH TO PLAY HARVARD ON DIAMOND

Dartmouth will play Harvard on the diamond next Spring in spite of all rumors to the effect that the Crimson and Green had severed athletic relations completely. The schedule has just been announced and the Dartmouth game will be played on May 27. The Yale dates are June 16 at New Haven and 17 at Soldiers field.

The complete schedule follows:

April 19, Massachusetts Aggies; 14, Bowdoin; 16, Maine; 18, West Point at West Point; 21, Catholic University at Washington; 22, Annapolis at Annapolis; 23 and 24, Georgetown at Washington; 25, Columbia at New York; 28, Rutgers; 30, Virginia.

May 2, Princeton; 5, Lafayette; 7, Colby, at Amherst; 9, Williams; 12, Holy Cross at Worcester; 13, Providence; 27, Dartmouth; 30, Brown at Providence.

June 3, Williams; 6, Brown; 10, Holy Cross; 13, Penn.; 16, Yale at New Haven; 17, Yale; 20, Yale at New York in one of ties.

Harvard to Have Two Hockey Teams

Harvard is to offer an innovation in hockey circles this Winter by the establishment of a second team as is the case in football each Fall. There are at present eighty candidates out for the seven positions on the varsity and at least a score of the candidates have shown ability to ably represent the Crimson so that Coach Wiuor's task to pick out his varsity first string should prove no easy task.

The establishment of a second team is a happy idea on the part of the versatile coach who has served his Alma Mater for eleven years as hockey coach without receiving one farthing for his services. The scrubs will not only find plenty of opportunity to work against the regulars, but in addition will have a schedule of their own, with some of the smaller colleges and high school scrubs as their prospective opponents.

Oxford Will Send Team to Penn Games

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3.—Oxford University will send a team from England to compete at the annual relay races under the auspices of the University of Pennsylvania here next April. A letter was received by Frank B. Ellis, graduate manager of the games, from Arnold A. S. Jackson, president of the Oxford University Athletic Club, accepting an invitation to participate.

Athletic authorities here believe the English university will be represented in the four mile championship relay event.

There are three men on the Oxford team capable of running the mile in less than 4.20. They are Tabor, formerly of Brown; Jackson, the English man who won the 3,000-metre race at the 1913 Olympic games, and Rodd, the South African half mile champion.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

It was only natural that the men identified with the new Red Sox deal should have tried to keep the matter a secret until the deal was completed. Although President Johnson of the American League was here for two days last week he succeeded in coming to town and getting out again without being noticed. Instead of going back to Chicago, however, he went to New York and while there inadvertently let slip the information that there was "something doing" in the Boston club. An alert New York baseball reporter pounced on the news and the result disclosed the identity of the man who had made the offer for half the Boston club's stock.

MR. LANNIN told the Boston reporters that he was sorry the matter had come to light before the deal was completed because there is always a chance for a slip up. He is in high hope, however, that everything will go through as planned, and that the papers will be signed within a few days. Presumably, Mr. Johnson is now at work on the Chicago end of the deal. It is in Chicago where all the Western stockholders reside. If McAleer is accepted.

UNDOUBTEDLY McAleer knew of the proposition before he left to join the world's tourists. From what can be learned of the early negotiations they started while the world's series was on. The report that one rumored during the American League meeting in Chicago three weeks ago and soon after Mr. Johnson came to Boston to investigate the situation here. He was evidently well satisfied or he would not have told of the offer for the Western stock when he reached New York. It is said that no word has reached Boston from Mr. Johnson in the past few days. Doubtless he is busy rounding up the Western stock.

MEANTIME, matters in connection with the Boston club remain in statu quo. When the deal is completed Mr. Lannin will take an active part in the management, for he is likely that he will take Mr. Johnson's advice in regard to the disposal of his interest in the Boston Club.

THE International League has, as usual, called its annual meeting for New York a day in advance of the National League meeting. This will give the minors a chance to clean up their affairs and be in shape to talk business with the big league managers. There are always a lot of trades to be discussed. Sometimes trades that are talked of in December do not materialize till the season opens. But the annual gathering of so many managers in New York early in December gives all hands a chance to feel the baseball market. The International Leaguers will meet next Monday and the National Leaguers the day following.

Tribute to Yankee Tennis Players

LONDON, Dec. 3.—A warm tribute is paid in the annual report issued of the English Lawn Tennis Association to the American players who won the Davis Cup this year at Wimbledon.

At the annual meeting of the association an attempt was made, but defeated by an overwhelming majority, to get the English Lawn Tennis Association to break away from the recent decision of the International Federation permitting the payment of the expenses of representative players from abroad competing for the world's championships.

Oak Park Disbanded; Will Not Play Everett

Efforts to arrange a post-season game between Everett High and Oak Park High of Chicago have failed. Faculty Manager Marks of Everett wired Manager Thuman of Oak Park in hopes of settle the scholastic championship, but the following telegram from the Chicago official gives big rooters for a revival of the challenge:

"After failing to get game last week from Everett, Board will not sanction any and neither team cares to play after Thanksgiving. With the teams [illegible] best team in the West, Board is loath to lose [illegible] early next year.

J. L. THALMAN."

Ebbetts' Son Heads the Newark Club

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 3.—Charles H. Ebbetts, Jr., son of the president of the Brooklyn National League Club, has been elected president of the Newark Club, 1913 champions of the International League. Ebbetts succeeds George L. Seidle, who was chosen vice-president. Brooklyn owns the Newark organization.

Wrestler Mahmout Is Still Alive

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 3.—Mahmout, the Bulgarian wrestler, reported some time ago as having been killed in battle in the Balkan war, is alive. A letter to that effect has been received from Mahmout by Henry Irslinger, an Austrian.

DARTMOUTH MAY PLAY GAME WITH PENN IN BOSTON

Dartmouth and the University of Pennsylvania will probably play their 1914 football contest in Boston, that is if a park with a sufficient seating capacity can be obtained. The Quaker towners of late years have been accustomed to paying their entire offering as gridiron performances on Franklin Field but when Dartmouth entered into a agreement last Fall to play this series in Philadelphia there was a tacit agreement, so it is said, to have the Princeton game return the compliment in 1914, in whatever city the Hanoverians might select.

If the Dartmouth authorities can be shown that large enough parking facilities can be obtained in the Hub it is probable that the game will come here in the meantime Manchester, N. H., is clamoring loudly for a big football match with Dartmouth as a preferred opponent against either Pennsylvania or Princeton. The Granite State city has a large area in Textile Field and its railroad facilities are of a high order.

Sharpe of Cornell is anxious to get on with Dartmouth. The present hitch is that the Ithacans want the match some date before the New York City Thanksgiving. Hanoverians have already had one bitter taste of Cleopatra Bluff football and are likely scouting to bring the game to Springfield, which is a great Dartmouth stronghold.

Judging from Glenn Warner's comparison of the Brown and Dartmouth teams to the disparagement of the latter Carlisle will probably not be included in next Fall's schedule. Dartmouth and Brown may patch up their differences again and return to former close association.

McCabe Favorite for Holy Cross Captaincy

WORCESTER, Dec. 3.—The election of a captain for next year's football team at Holy Cross will probably be held today. McCabe, Cahill, Donovan, and Mullin all seem to have a fair chance for the honor. McCabe is a strong favorite. The Athletic Council has awarded letters to the following members of this year's squad: Captain Mahler, Manager Louis Bolgardner, Cahill, Mullin, O'Brien, Lemoran, Lee, Ostergren, Hagerty, Brawley, Sherman, Bell, Powell, Vogel, Carey, O'Connor, O'Keefe, Flint, Rogers, McCaffery and McCabe.

THE FAMILY CUPBOARD

A Thrilling Story of High Society Life in New York

Adapted from the Big Dramatic Success by Owen Davis

(Novelized by)

Ida Vera Bateman

(From Owen Davis' play now being presented in New York by William A. Brady.—Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

"SAY it before I get back—that gives you ten minutes—you'll go there for good!" said Ken. He had determined on a season of housecleaning. Kitty should have her dustbin broken life must be patched as best it could—but to the smile and sings of Kitty's errant fancy he would no longer offer a refuge.

The door slammed with insistent emphasis.

Dick looked at it reflectively.

"Where's he going?"

"To look his watch!" explained Kitty nonchalantly.

Dick came closer and said in a confidential and familiar tone of understanding and good fellowship:

"Gettin' to be a regular little feller, ain't he?"

"He's all in," said Kitty unsentimentally.

"Sure he is, but what's the odds if you love him? Love's better'n money, it gets you more—if you say it quick enough. Well—I'm off. I open Monday up in Albany. Eighty per—if it is four shows a day looks pretty soft—after this!"

He looked around him with a sneer. His roving eye lingered a bit on Kitty's face to see how she would take the suggestion he meant to convey.

"Good-bye, Dick!" said Kitty in a far-away voice.

She had put the table between them, and had seated herself in a high, straight chair. Her hands were clasped loosely in her lap—and she seemed scarcely conscious of Dick Le Roy and his "eighty per."

Dick came over to the table and leaned across it—so that his sleek brown head was close to her golden one. He did not attempt to touch her—he only gave the impression of nearness. His eyes were always intent on her far-away gray-blue ones; they were sweeping her face with the remorseless revealing of the clear searchlight.

"A hundred and seventy-five double!" He waited a moment for this to sink into Kitty's money-loving consciousness.

"I got it in black and white"—His voice took on a deeper tone, but his manner was guarded—held in leash. "A hundred and seventy-five double—and a wedding ring, if you're fond of jewelry."

Kitty put her elbows on the table and sank her chin in the palms of her hands. She was still staring—staring intently. Dick wondered what she visioned. But the visions of even a Kitty Claire are a little beyond the happy-go-lucky Dick Le Roys of this world.

"No!" said Kitty.

"Well—good-bye."

Dick started for the door and then stopped—a curious little smile had come over his face. He knew the old spirit of contradiction—the old interests of the "small-time artists" life. He came back again, smiling broadly—and stood just back of the table—where he could touch Kitty if he would.

"The Six Quiglers are on the bill at Albany. Shall I give 'em your love?"

Kitty's face brightened with a growing flame of interest.

"The Quiglers! I haven't seen 'em in four years. I'd like to see Mame again—and the bunch!" Her voice took on a far-away reminiscent tone. "IT WAS FUN, SOMETIMES!"

"Most games is fun sometimes—and most of 'em is—HELL—sometimes," said Dick, with slow stress. "Good-bye."

He went to the door, then stopped. He had another inspiration.

"Kitty!"—

"Well?"

Dick came back again.

"That's some song—too classy for the little time, and I know a clever guy—a real swell author, that's got a new fire sketch. He's a cripple—an' he'll let me have it for the price of one of them jointed legs. There's a fellow an' a dame—they been married a month, an'—but what do you care?" He waited a moment to acclore his full effect of stimulating avarice, curiosity and lese thess for the old life, for the old "punch," and ambition—such ambition as might still flicker in the one-lapped soul of a little vampire. Kitty Claire.

"So long!" he concluded, and went a far as turning the handle of the door and picking up his big leather bag.

Kitty wondered aloud.

"The man gets all the fat in that sketch, I suppose?"

"Sure part for the girl." Dick was very sure of himself now. "Good-bye." He started down the corridor.

"I'm coming—I'll go!" cried Kitty Claire.

"You will?" Dick was like most people who scheme and plan for a thing. When they get that "consummation devoutly to be wished" they suddenly relax, and scarcely know how to accept their success.

Kitty spoke with a feling of breathless desire to get it all over quickly—quickly before her fickle little mind changed again past all her willing.

"I can't stand it here! I'll be sorry, so will you, but I'll go!"

Somehow now that the moment had come—the moment toward which Dick's very effort had been tending for the past month, there was just a simple effectiveness about it all. It seemed the obvious thing to do. Emotion was a quality from which Kitty felt for a moment walled and protected by all the cheating she had been feeling from that moment long weeks ago when Dick Le Roy had come back from his "big scream west of Chicago"—when Kenneth Nelson of the Fifth avenue tailored look had crossed her vision—and when Charles Nelson, the Ramon whom she nor circumstances could conquer, had marched sternly and strongly out of her life.

Dick went forward to kiss the girl he had won—at last.

"Good old Kitty! Give us a kiss."

KITTY'S PHILOSOPHY

"Let's wait!" cried Kitty scarcely understanding her own motive. "I know I'm a fool—but he's such a queer kid."

She could leave Kenneth for Dick, for on the eve of going, she could not kiss his more than successor in the room sacred to the one man who had thought her "good."

Recalling in amused amusement, Dick cried: "A little more and you'd been stuck on him!"

"I wonder? Dick, I wonder? Somehow I see why you men don't understand women! Just now I don't precisely cotton to Kitty May's ways! I wonder"—

"Don't wonder! Sure you'd been stuck on him—except for the truth of that poetry gag about 'a little less'—an' there's a block between you!"

Kitty pondered on aloud—putting into words some of her own possibilities for finer womanhood—the finesses she and circumstances had starved and battered about and beaten into subjection—the womanhood whose only revenge was a subtle stirring now and then—a puzzlement to Kitty who scarcely realized how different she might have been!

"First it was to get square—and I did! Then—you see—he thinks I'm good . . . That's funny, of course—but sometimes it didn't seem so funny—sort of—sweet—and I'd think . . . . But that's a laugh . . . ." She sighed and then broke into a laugh that gradually steadied to some semblance of mirth. "You'd better get me out of this, Dick."

"Come on! Come on here and now—pack your things and we'll do a fight before the kid gets back to call time on the ten minutes he gave me for sayin' the fond farewells."

Dick's mirth was very genuine. Wasn't he the victor? Couldn't he afford to laugh?

"I packed my trunk," announced Kitty regretfully.

Dick pondered the matter a minute. Then an impish smile broke over his face. Ken Should aid and abet the elopement.

"Well—I guess you'll have to borrow the kid's. Where is it?"

GOODBY TRUNK

Mischievous and irresponsible glee lit Kitty's face.

"That's a real scream. Come on! I'll help you! It's under his bed."

Like two children on a lark, lastead of a matured woman contemplating matrimony—and a possible life partnership—the two of them brushed aside the pretenses and scampered into Ken's room. Down on hands and knees they fell, jerked the sole leather trunk marked K. N. from its resting place, and, each lending a hand, they carried their booty into the living room and banged it down on the floor.

"I'd like to dance a fandango—But time presses. Go get your possessions, Kitty!" chuckled Dick.

Kitty started across the corridor, but Dick called after her—

"Say, can I empty my bag into your trunk?"

"Sure!" cried Kitty merrily, entering into the spirit of this far-from-sacred occasion.

Dick tossed most of the contents of his bag helter-skelter into the bottom of the trunk. But he lifted carefully, affectionately even, and laid in neat rows in a tray, a choice collection of colored shirts—pink, blue, lavender—a rainbow-hued galaxy.

"There, my beauties!" cried he, pressing a fairly ecstatic kiss on one ruched pink bosom. "You will make one sure fire hit in Oshkosh!"

An Easy Way to Get Fat and Be Strong

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on dragging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

Thanks to a remarkable new scientific discovery, it is now possible to combine into single form the very elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich fat-laden blood. This master stroke of modern chemistry is called Sargol and has been termed the great-est of flesh-builders. Sargol aims through its regenerative, reconstructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to every starved, broken-down cell and tissue of your body. You can really picture the result when this amazing transformation has taken place and you notice how your cheeks fill out, rollows about your neck, shoulders and bust fills appear and you take on from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, effective. Your druggist has it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

Caution—While Sargol has given excellent results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles, it should not be taken by those who do not wish to gain ten pounds or more.

William F. Kirk Tells About:

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

I SED that Mister Carnegie is back from abroad & that he is very fond of the Kaiser, sed Ma last nite when she was reading the papers.

That makes it quite an around, sed Pa. Ever since the beginning of time, Pa sed, kings & rich men has been chummy. It always made the rich men throw out their chests, sed Pa. & it often calm in handy for the king won the peace rent calm due. I haven't the remotest idea but the Kaiser is friends with Mr. Carnegie for any such purpose, Pa sed because he knows that if he ever tried to touch Mister Carnegie Andy wud say Hoot Mon, & give him a lot of books to read. But it is nice to have prominent people get together & pass the time away.

I can just imagine, sed Pa, what a grate afternoon those two old boys must have spent together. I can just see em them out frolicking at a game of golf, laffing & kicking up their heels and saying, Now if good old John D. had only be here our cup of happiness wud be full.

I suppose Andy & little Nicola cadet & the Kaiser's little German caddy got chummy, too, & told him about how far they cud jump & how well they cud fite. & I can imagine the two grate men dining together afterward & Andy giving a toast like.

We two shall drink the flowing cup

And toast each other's grate renown

As long as your mustache sticks up

And our guys bend back down.

Yes, indeed, sed Pa, I know just about how the old sports passed away there time until it was time that even kings and millyunaires shud go to the bay. I know just how they felt, sed Pa, because I used to have just such times as that with the Prince of Wales, only we was younger & there was more speed attached to our sessions. It is different now you get an old ass like me, Pa sed. When a man is going he gets more stiff on the talk & me & the Prince was speed boys for fair.

I never knew that you knew a Prince of Wales, sed Ma.

Up-to-the Minute Jokes

Little Johnny, who is of an inquiring turn, was having a quiet little talk with his mother. Johnny wanted to know why Mr. Juggins married Mrs. Juggins. His mother wasn't able to tell very clearly. Johnny thought a while, and then asked:

"Mother, why did you marry my dad?"

"Johnny, I married your father because he saved me from drowning," replied his mother.

"I'll bet that's why dad's always tellin' me not to go in for swimmin'," said Johnny.

Mrs. Shortley was discussing the latest fashions with a young lady caller.

"Did you say your husband was fond of those clinging gowns, May?"

"Yes. He likes one to cling to me for about three years."

Son—I say, pa!

Father—Well?

Son—Is a vessel a boat?

Father—Yes.

Son (after some thought)—I say, pa!

Father (impatiently)—What is it?

Son—What kind of a boat is a blood vessel?

Father (absently)—It's a lifeboat. Now run away to bed.

These choice ingredients are mixed and baked by trained cake-makers—specialists, whose whole thought and aim is to give you perfect cake.

U. S. SENATORS LAUD THE HETCH HETCHY SPECIAL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—When a magnificent sixteen-page special Washington edition of the San Francisco Examiner, devoted entirely to the Hetch Hetchy bill, greeted members of the United States Senate this morning, it was the signal for a veritable deluge of praise.

The paper, edited, illustrated, and printed in Washington by a trained corps of writers and artists, presented to Senators an array of matter appropriate by and orchestrated to suit the taste of the subject impartially from all points of view.

Many Senators carried their copy into the chamber and sat at their desks poring tensely and fiercely over the news of San Francisco's water supply with the greatest interest, while Senator Works was occupying the floor of the Senate in a speech in opposition to a project that is vital to the welfare and health of California's chief city.

Expressions of Approval.

Of all the men on the Pacific Coast the voice of Senator Works was the only one raised in opposition to the bill, which has been passed by the House and which is now clamoring with full appeal in the Senate. From the desks of Senators there were visible numerous copies of the special edition, and the most effective rebuke to the position assumed by the California Senator.

Among expressions of approval of Mr. Hearst's energy and aggressiveness in this fight to improve San Francisco were the following:

Senator Fitzhugh of Nevada:—"I was amazed at the elaborateness of your edition and the completeness and thoroughness with which it dealt with the subject. Your paper is a powerful factor in informing the Senate and bringing us success and I am glad to acknowledge a debt so plainly due to Mr. Hearst."

Senator Newlands of Nevada:—"I read the Washington edition of the familiar San Francisco Examiner with the greatest interest. It will prove of the highest value in the fight in the Senate. Mr. Hearst deserves great credit for the enormous exertion to a cause so all favor."

Magnificent Enterprise.

Senator Thomas of Colorado:—"The woman from Colorado finds such a magnificent display of energy and enterprise might be expected to William Randolph Hearst. The paper seems more than a newspaper."

Senator Perkins of California:—"I congratulate Mr. Hearst for his wonderful efforts in behalf of the Hetch Hetchy project, in which every citizen of San Francisco is interested and for which every one in the Senate ought to be glad to cast. The paper pieces the whole thing together in such plain, simple, understandable fashion that if there were any doubts in the minds of any Senator they must now be dissolved."

'Damaged Goods' to Stay; 30 Lines Out

All Characters Remain in Brieux Play After Conference.

The elimination of thirty lines from the speech of the girl in "Damaged Goods" at the Tremont Theatre has met the criticism of the city authorities and as a result the play will probably go on unmolested through the remaining three weeks. Mayor Fitzgerald had a conference with Richard Bennett, the actor-manager of the Brieux play, and made his personal comment on the objectionable lines.

As the play is now, given the characters have not been materially changed, nor any omitted. The Mayor's strongest objection was to the lines now cut out.

Anthony Comstock: A Suppressor or a Protector of Vice?

An audience which listened sympathetically and intelligently to the reading of a so-called "sex play" in a New York church on a recent Sunday was assured that the drama would be staged and presented "despite any interference by Anthony Comstock."

The president of an organization which has for its purpose the combating of the social evil by attacking it at its very source with the weapons of light and of education, finds it necessary to say of a book written by Miss Christabel Pankhurst:

"I understand that Mr. Comstock has threatened with arrest any one selling this volume. I can understand a man of his calibre making such a threat, and, if so, he certainly will have an opportunity of proving whether or not he means it."

To any one not conversant with New York institutions, and ignorant of the life and public services of Mr. Anthony Comstock, the question would suggest itself: "Who is this man whom crusaders against the forces of evil are thus forced to defy? Why does he set himself squarely across the path of an intelligent attack upon an evil which, though sheltered behind a conspiracy of silence, is notorious, and menaces the vitality of individuals, the integrity of the family, and the foundations of the State?"

Comstock is the head of a society created for the suppression of vice, but which is in grave danger of continuing as the protector of vice. For vice, like noxious vermin, flourishes best, nay, flourishes only, in darkness. Concealment is its weapon; publicity its most certain destruction. Social workers and university settlements strove long against the loathsome "cadet" organization which preyed upon the daughters of the great East Side, but not until the Lexow Committee turned the bright light of the fullest publicity upon the panders and their system was the traffic in girlhood checked.

That it has been wholly abolished, no one claims, but that it is greatly circumscribed, made more perilous for its practitioners, and less menacing to possible victims, who are widely warned by the publicity shed upon the cadets and their methods, is unquestionable.

Much of this publicity has taken the form of romance. Some of it has been embodied in dramatic form. Its literature has included "best sellers" and stage successes. But if the greatest good is to be accomplished, precisely such success for the novel or the play in which the lesson is taught is needed. Sensational? Perhaps they are, but if the sensation is one of aversion to the practitioners of vice and all their wiles and ways, it cannot be too widely spread—even "despite any interference by Anthony Comstock."

The social evil, the results of which are an ever present and malignant menace to the health and mind of man, is by no means confined to the slums. It is doubtful whether its creatures can be segregated, but nothing is more certain than that its results cannot. Its records are not written on police blotters alone, but blister and sear the flesh of many an innocent woman and child. The pestilence appears far from its source and the most numerous victims of the poison are not those by whom it was distilled.

We have had other curses in the land than those attaching to sexual immorality, but we have not endured them in silence. Certainly we have not silenced the brave champions who attacked them with the weapons of speech or of science. "I will not equivocate; I will not excuse; I will not retreat a single inch; and I will be heard!" cried William Lloyd Garrison when weaker enemies of slavery urged him to cease his attack upon that "peculiar system" lest greater evil should result. But he refused to be silenced. The truths he preached were offensive to refined tastes. Some of the evils of human slavery which he told in all their bare and revolting truth were nauseating. He shocked the squeamish, but he compelled attention. The very people whom his revelations most revolted were the ones whom his facts compelled to action, and with the spread of precise knowledge of its meaning slavery was swept away.

Tuberculosis is a human scourge. Its victims deserve all of sympathy, all of human aid and kindness than can possibly be given them. A few years ago it was thought the part of sympathy and kindness to ignore, at least in their presence, their ailment, and to speak of it in their absence vaguely as something not to be combated and little to be discussed.

We have changed all that. Tuberculosis is recognized as a highly communicable evil, curable indeed, but, unless properly controlled in individual cases, rapidly contracted by others than the original victim. The consumptive of the slum may loose the bacteria which infect the dweller in the city's most exclusive neighborhoods. So we compel the slum landlord to make his tenements hygienic; we isolate as far as possible the consumptive in every stage of the disease; we educate the public to 'avoid contagion in every way. About consumption is no mysterious silence. Rather by continued agitation, preaching and teaching we have made its nature so known to all men that it is becoming a disappearing disease.

So, too, with smallpox, with yellow fever, with all the communicable ills with which mankind is afflicted—save one sort only.

Prudery has hedged about with a veil of silence those diseases which, usually having their origin in sexual immorality, are often conveyed without any immoral act. Even to know of their existence is in some prudish minds a moral taint, while to explain their genesis to the world, and to make the methods of preventing their transmission common knowledge, seems to be thought a violation of the proprieties, if not indeed a gross infraction of good morals.

Thus the world is presented with the paradoxical, the inexplicable spectacle of the head of a society for the suppression of vice interfering to conceal from people in general the facts concerning the horrible penalties which vice lays upon its practitioners, and the piteous suffering visited upon the wholly innocent as the result of ignorant, thoughtless or careless violations of moral law.

Such a situation would be incredible if it did not exist. Vice shielded by prudery, and prudery in turn guarded from the disquieting attacks of truth by an official legally entrusted with the machinery for the suppression of vice!

It is quite idle (more than that, it is utter folly) to look upon the growing tendency to discuss problems of sex freely and frankly as either a passing craze or a symptom of morbid decadence. It is an evidence of returning sanity, of new enlightenment. Sex is the great factor of nature. Upon its impulses the continuance of the human race devolves. But to the abuse or misdirection of these impulses are due many of the gravest diseases, physical and mental, with which mankind is cursed. Shall the facts concerning the origin and dissemination of these evils be kept secret, that in utter and needless ignorance men and women may innocently, or even with guilt, contract them?

Concealment of vice is not suppression of vice. Mr. Comstock, through misdirected and unintelligent zeal, is not doing his immediate cause a service, while he is working irreparable hurt to the public health.

A vial of typhoid germs poured into a water main would work a pestilence in New York. Would Mr. Comstock silence the witness who should detect a man in the commission of that crime?

A case of bubonic plague would be swiftly stopped at Quarantine, and the sufferer isolated. Mr. Comstock apparently would let the vessel proceed on its way without remark, the subject of bubonic plague not being pleasant to talk of publicly.

The thoughtful men and women who have undertaken to educate the public on sexual dangers do well to defy Comstock. They have undertaken a work as unsavory as that of the scavenger—and as needful; as cruel as that of the surgeon, and as merciful. They will be accused of sensationalism of notoriety seeking, of indecency, but they should persist. The evils they attack are very real, very glaring, very noisome, very pestilential and cannot be dispelled with feather dusters or with rosewater.

The Pied Piper

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

There is a legend of a "Piper Pied,"
Who charmed the rats with music of his reed.
Shrilling his way down to the river side
He led them to their death. The Town in Greed
Withheld the promised price; the Piper then
Walked, blithely playing, past the homes of men.
The listening children followed on his trail
And none came back. So ends the olden tale.

Still lives the Piper; piping thro' the land.
He calls the children as he called of yore.
The greedy world, indifferent, sees the band
Follow him blindly, to return no more.
Shilling his tune, as blithely as of old.
Hard by the homes of men, unchecked and bold,
He pipes his music while the children dance
And disappear. His name is IGNORANCE.

The Two Sisters

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER VIII.

ALTHOUGH chained to the dull routine of her work, Julia Marvin was not discontented. Every morning found her at her post at the notion counter. Late afternoon saw her walking home to her barely-furnished room. She went to bed early and slept until the whirr of her alarm clock aroused her. The small alcohol lamp which she and Caryl had owned had been replaced by a little gas stove, and, after she had dressed each morning, Julia would prepare with this a light breakfast of toast and coffee—just enough for two. Then she would wake Caryl, and the sisters would eat; Julia with her hat on, ready to hurry off to the store; the younger girl, sleepy and cross and clad in a wrapper, casting wistful glances at the bed from which she had been called all too soon for her.

The two girls had few recreations. After standing all day behind a counter, waiting upon a horde of querulous shoppers, Julia's one wish was to go home, eat her supper and spend the hours left before bedtime in reading.

In the evenings, Caryl had her school work to do. At least Julia insisted that she should do this and was inflexible in the matter in spite of the younger girl's protests that she was "tired" or that she knew tomorrow's lesson already. Sometimes on Saturday nights Julia permitted herself and Caryl the rare luxury of a trip to the theatre. Seated high in the second balcony, the pair would watch the performance with breathless interest. On Sunday mornings they went to a church of the denomination to which their mother had belonged, and in the afternoons they rode far out into the country on the trolley, or strolled through a park or one of the city's museums.

It was a quiet life and a frugal one, but Julia was not dissatisfied. There was always in her mind the thought that she was earning her own living and that appreciation strengthened her in the purpose that had at first seemed so useless. Moreover, although she had never quite lost her fear of the great city, she was learning to think it wonderful. Often she slipped into Mrs. Halloran's tidy rooms for a half-hour's chat, and the wise Irishwoman with her kind heart gave her comfort and not a little wise advice. The girls at the counter with her in the store had shown themselves friendly to her.

Caryl was the source of Julia's only anxiety. She would tell herself sometimes that if it were not for her uneasiness about her younger sister she would be quite content. Caryl did not seem to be progressing in her work and she was constantly complaining of people and conditions in the school she attended. She had learned to write fairly well, although not with rapidity, upon the machine that Julia had rented for her, and she claimed that she was as well grounded as she cared to be in the rudiments of shorthand.

One evening in mid-Summer Julia, entering her room, found Caryl sitting upon the bed, her books on the floor, while on her lips was a mutinous pout that Julia knew and dreaded.

"Judy," said the younger girl, abruptly, "I'm not going back to that old school. It's horrid!"

"Not going back!" repeated Julia in consternation. "What's the matter?"

"I'm tired," answered Caryl, pettishly. "I'm tired of working for nothing. Here I work my fingers to the bone day and night and"——

Remembering her efforts to induce her little sister to study, Julia could not repress a smile, and Caryl, seeing it, lost her self-control.

"You may smile in that superior way if you like, Julia Marvin!" she exclaimed, hotly. "Of course, you don't want me to do what I wish about anything, but all the same I tell you I am not going back to that old place!"

"Suppose," suggested Julia, calmly, "that before you fly off into a temper you tell me what is the matter, Caryl!"

"There's nothing particularly the matter," muttered Caryl, sulkily. "But I'm sick of being bossed. It was not so bad as long as I had a man teaching me. He was quite pleasant. You know I told you of some of the kind things he said to me. But now they've put a woman in his place and she is a cross old thing. She doesn't like me and she pesters me all the time."

Julia felt that the moment had come for strong speech, and she drew in her breath quickly. "Yes," she said, "as long as there was a man teaching you, a man who liked your looks and told you so, and was nice to you because you were pretty, it was all right. But now, when you have a woman teacher who doesn't care whether you are pretty or not, you want to give up the work and make the money paid for your tuition go for nothing. That's about it, isn't it?"

"Well, I won't work under that woman—I won't! I won't!" sobbed Caryl, throwing herself upon the bed in a storm of angry tears. "I'd—I'd rather be in a convent than in this dull old place where we never see any one, or meet any one, and nobody cares to give us a good time."

Julia gazed at her sister for a long moment in silence. "Sometimes, my dear," she said, slowly, at last, "sometimes I almost think that a convent would be about the best place for you, after all. Yes, sister, I almost believe that!"
